This research was carried out as a part of J. Bates's PhD research, which was funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council. Analysis was carried out in the George Pitt Rivers laboratory in the McDonald Institute for Archaeological Research, University of Cambridge. Samples were provided by the Land, Water, Settlement project, co-directed by C.A. Petrie and R.N. Singh, which is a collaboration between the University of Cambridge and Banaras Hindu University that was carried out with the support of the Archaeological Survey of India. The Land, Water, Settlement project was funded by the UK India

Education Research Initiative, British Academy Stein Arnold Fund, Isaac Newton Trust, McDonald Institute for Archaeological Research and the Research Councils UK. The contribution made by C.A. Petrie was supported by funding from the European Research Council (ERC) under the European Union's Horizon 2020 research and innovation programme (grant agreement no 648609). Additional fieldwork funding for J. Bates was provided by the Arts and Humanities Research Council, Rouse-Ball Research Fund, Cambridge India Partnership Fund, Division of Archaeology Fieldwork Fund and Trinity College Projects Fund. The authors would also like to thank Prof. Martin Jones, Prof. Dorian Fuller, Prof. Marco Madella, Dr. Michèle Wollstonecroft and Dr. Rachel Ballantyne for their advice and help.
