

Retraction Note to: Apharsemon, Myrrh and Olibanum: Ancient Medical Plants

Shimshon Ben-Yehoshua and Lumír Ondřej Hanuš

© Springer Science+Business Media Dordrecht 2014

Z. Yaniv, N. Dudai (eds.), Medicinal and Aromatic Plants of the Middle-East,

Medicinal and Aromatic Plants of the World 2, DOI 10.1007/978-94-017-9276-9

DOI 10.1007/978-94-017-9276-9_18

After publication of this chapter, it was brought to the Editors' attention that there were potentially several serious concerns regarding questions of originality.

The Editors, assisted by the Publisher, have conducted an in-depth investigation in accordance with the Committee on Publication Ethics (COPE) guidelines.

The chapter: Apharsemon, Myrrh and Olibanum: Ancient Medical Plants appearing in: Medicinal and Aromatic Plants of the Middle-East, 2014, pp 67–150, has been retracted because it contains a significant amount of material from a previously published manuscript without acknowledging the source. The previously published manuscript that has been duplicated in this chapter is: 1. Spices: Frankincense, Myrrh, and Balm of Gilead: Ancient Spices of Southern Arabia and Judea (Shimshon Ben-Yehoshua, Carole Borowitz, and Lumír Ondřej Hanuš) Horticulture Reviews Volume 39, DOI: 10.1002/9781118100592.ch1. Copyright © 2012 Wiley-Blackwell.