Anna Dronzek is the author of “Gender Roles and the Marriage Market in Fifteenth-Century England: Ideals and Practices,” in Davis, Müller, and Jones (editors), Love, Marriage and Family Ties in the Middle Ages (2003); “Gendered Theories of Education in Fifteenth-Century Conduct Books,” in Ashley and Clark (editors), Medieval Conduct (2001); and “What We Talk About When We Talk About Feminism,” Medieval Feminist Newsletter (2000). She has taught medieval history at the University of Minnesota, Morris, Rhodes College, and the University of Denver, and is currently attending law school at the University of Colorado, Boulder.

Theresa Earenfight is associate professor of History and chair of the Medieval Studies Program at Seattle University. Her edited collection, Queenship and Political Power in Medieval and Early Modern Spain (2005), included her essay, “Absent Kings: Queens as Political Partners in the Crown of Aragon.” She is the author of “Political Culture and Political Discourse in the Letters of Queen María of Castile,” (2003); “Doing without the Persona of the Prince? Kings, Queens, and the Idea of Monarchy in Medieval Europe” (2007); and The King’s Other Body: María of Castile and the Crown of Aragon (2009).

Lara Farina, associate professor of English at West Virginia University, focuses her research on medieval women’s devotional literature and on medieval readers in their communities. She is the author of Reading for Pleasure: Erotic Discourse and Early English Religious Writing (2006) and “Before Affection: Christ I and the Social Erotic” (2001).

Sharon Farmer is professor of History at the University of California, Santa Barbara. She is the author of Surviving Poverty in Medieval Paris: Gender Ideology and the Daily Lives of the Poor and Communities of Saint Martin: Legend and Ritual in Medieval Tours. She is currently working on a collection of essays on women and work in medieval Paris, as well as a monograph on the impact of the cultures of the Mediterranean on northern French material culture in the late thirteenth and early fourteenth centuries.

Helen A. Gaudette is director of the College Preparatory Programs and an Adjunct Professor of History at Queens College, City University of New York. Her research focuses on the power, piety, and patronage of Queen Melisende in the Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem.

Erin L. Jordan is assistant professor in the Department of History at the University of Northern Colorado. She has written several articles on the social and economic aspects of monasticism in the southern Low Countries in the thirteenth century. Her book Women, Power and Religious Patronage (2006) investigates questions pertaining to inheritance, female rulers, and the feudal system in late twelfth- and early thirteenth-century France.

Sally Livingston is lecturer on History and Literature at Harvard University. A comparative medievalist, her research focuses on the relationship between women’s ability to own property and marriage narratives. She is the co-author of “Outrunning Atalanta: Feminine Destiny in Alchemical Transmutation” (1980) and is currently at work on a literary history of medieval ideas of money.

Daniel M. Murtaugh is associate professor of English at Florida Atlantic University. He is the author of Piers Plowman and the Image of God (1978) and has published widely on Chaucer, Henryson, Spenser, Chretien de Troyes, and Dante.
