Orit Bashkin is assistant professor of modern Middle Eastern history at the University of Chicago. Her publications include articles on the history of Arab-Jews in Iraq, on Iraqi history, and on Arabic literature. She has co-edited a book with Israel Gershoni and Liat Kozma, which includes translations into Hebrew of seminal works by Egyptian intellectuals: Sculpturing Culture in Egypt: Cultural Planning, National Identity and Social Change in Egypt, 1890–1939 (Tel Aviv: Ramot Press, 1999). Her book The Other Iraq: Intellectuals, Pluralism and Culture in Hashemite Iraq, 1921–1958 was published by Stanford University Press.

Jessica Franklin is a PhD candidate in the Department of Political Science at McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada. She is currently completing her dissertation titled “Building From and Moving Beyond the State: The National and Transnational Dimensions of Afro-Brazilian Women’s Activism.” Her research interests include racial and gender identity formations, black feminisms, and Afro-descendant and women’s social movements in Latin America. Her most recent publication is a chapter titled “Afro-Brazilian Women’s Identities and Activism: National and Transnational Discourses” in the edited volume Latin American Identities after 1980 (Waterloo: Wilfrid Laurier University Press, 2010). Her field research has been supported by the Canada-Latin America and the Caribbean Research Exchange Grant (2007).

Beatrice Jacobson is professor of English at St. Ambrose University. In addition to women’s studies courses ranging from the introductory to the seminar level, she teaches courses in early American, African American, and women’s literatures. Recent publications include studies of contemporary novelist Alice McDermott and nineteenth-century educator Mary Lyon. Current research includes a study of literacy in the lives of Ecuadorian women weavers. In addition, she serves on the board of Centro de Estudios Interamericanos in Cuenca, Ecuador, where she teaches and directs study-abroad programs.

Anna Kłosowska is Professor of French at Miami University. She is author of Queer Love in the Middle Ages (Palgrave Macmillan, 2005) and editor of Violence Against Women in Medieval Texts (University Press of Florida, 1998) and of Madeleine de l’Aubespine, Selected Poems and translations (University of Chicago Press, 2007). She published some thirty articles on queer theory and pre-modern literature. She received the 2009 Nancy Lyman Roelker prize from the Sixteenth Century Society for “Erotica and Women in Early Modern France: Madeleine de l’Aubespine’s Queer Poems” (Journal of the History of Sexuality). She is currently working on a monograph on l'Aubespine, author of one of the earliest openly bisexual poems in French.

Bernardita Llanos is professor of Spanish and women's studies and chair of the Department of Modern Languages at Denison University. She has published extensively on Latin American women writers, Chilean literature, and culture. Among her recent publications are the edition of a collection of essays on writer Diamela Eltit, Letras y proclamas: la estética literaria de Diamela Eltit (2006) and the book Passionate Subjects/Split Subjects in Twentieth-Century Literature in Chile (Brunet, Bombal, Eltit, 2009).

Gul Aldikacti Marshall is assistant professor in the Department of Sociology at the University of Louisville. Her teaching and research interests are in the areas of gender, social movements, social policy, and mass media. Currently she is analyzing the dynamics of national and international activism of feminist groups whose advocacy efforts are shaping gender policies in Turkey.

Irene Mata is an assistant professor in the Women's and Gender Studies Department at Wellesley College where she teaches courses in Chicana/Latina literature and culture. Her research interests include the analysis of labor and immigration representations in contemporary cultural productions and the ways in which current globalization projects have impacted the lives of women on the U.S./Mexico border area.

Clara Román-Odio is professor of Spanish and Hispanic American literature at Kenyon College. She is author of Octavio Paz en los debates críticos y estéticos del siglo XX (Galicia, España: tresCtres Editores, 2006) and coeditor of Global and Local Geographies: The (Dis)locations of Contemporary Feminisms (Letras Femeninas 33(1), 2007). She is currently working on a book titled Sacred Iconographies in Chicana Cultural Productions: Feminism and Empowerment in Transnational Networks. Forthcoming publications include "Queering the Sacred: Love as Oppositional Consciousness in Alma Lopez's Visual Art" (Alicia Gaspar de Alba, ed., University of Texas Press, Chicana Matters Series, 2011) and "Globalización de-centrada: feminismo transnacional, política cultural y la Virgen de Tepeyac en el arte visual de las chicanas" (Patrice Giasson, ed., CECMA, 2011).

Marta Sierra is associate professor of Spanish at Kenyon College. She has published extensively on the literatures and cultures of Latin America, the Argentinean avant-gardes, poetry and film of the 1990s Argentina, and feminist conceptualizations of space in the literatures and cultures of Argentina and Chile. She is the coeditor of Global and Local Geographies: The (Dis)locations of Contemporary Feminisms (Letras Femeninas 33(1), 2007). Her book Gendered Spaces in Argentinean Women's Writing has been accepted for publication by Palgrave Macmillan.

Katy Strzpek is the director of women's studies at St. Ambrose University and teaches the Cross-Cultural Introduction to Women's Studies, Women in Africa, and other seminars. Her research focuses on the intersections of feminist pedagogy and social praxis. Her article “Activist Girls in Culture of Apathy” (in progress), analyzes interviews with activist teen girls in the Midwest in order to determine how their activism helps them develop positive self-identities and critique systems of social control in their schools and communities. She is a proud community organizer, who advises several student groups and local organizations that focus on human rights.

Katherine Van Blair is director and associate professor of social work at St. Ambrose University. She teaches courses including Feminist Social Work, Empowerment Social Work in Mental Health, and Couple and Family Therapy. Her scholarship focus is on feminist administration, social justice in university systems, and feminist family therapy, and extends into local boards and social service agencies.

Kimberly A. Williams earned her PhD in women’s studies from the University of Maryland and is currently an assistant professor at Mount Royal University in Calgary. Her research interests include transnational feminist and queer theories and movements and feminist theories of nationalism, militarization, and international relations. Her forthcoming book, titled Imagining Russia: Making Feminist Sense of American Nationalism in U.S.-Russian Relations, was awarded the 2009 SUNY Press Dissertation/First Book Prize in Women’s and Gender Studies.
