

Contributors

Felicia Brown-Haywood is the director of Student Affairs and chair of the Diversity and Educational Equity Committee at Penn State University, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, United States. She is an associate pastor of Beulah Baptist Church in Steelton, PA. She is a well-known musician/vocalist, community activist, and adult educator on race relations and cross-cultural issues in Harrisburg and surrounding vicinities.

Shauna Butterwick is associate professor and Adult Education Program chair in the Department of Educational Studies, University of British Columbia. She teaches adult education, research methodology, leadership, and doctoral seminars and has researched women's learning in a range of contexts: social movements, community, workplaces, and government-funded programs. Feminist, participatory, and arts-based approaches inform her teaching and research. She facilitated a popular theater project and continues to study how arts-based approaches enable activists' learning.

Nadira Charaniya is assistant dean and campus director of the Los Angeles, California, campus of Springfield College School of Human Services.

Darlene Clover is associate professor in Faculty of Education, University of Victoria, Canada. She worked previously for the International Council for Adult Education. Her current areas of research and teaching include women and leadership, feminist adult education, community cultural leadership, environmental adult education, and arts-based adult education. Together with Joyce Stalker, she published The Arts and Social Justice—Re-crafting Adult Education and Community Cultural Leadership (UK: NIACE, 2007).

Carol Lynne D'Arcangelis has been an aspiring ally member of No More Silence since December 2005. She is a doctoral student in Adult Education and Community Development at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, University of Toronto. She has taught various university courses, including on women, power, and politics. She previously lived in Guatemala and El Salvador working in the human rights and development fields.

Heather Ferris is a group facilitator, counselor, and educator with over 30 years' experience in North America, Australia, and Southern Africa. She has facilitated support and process groups, formal and informal learning, issue-based/consciousness raising, meditation, and therapy groups with corporations, schools, communities, university classes in rural and urban African development, with children, youth, and adults. Her teachers have been psychologists, doctors, indigenous and Western healers, adult educators, meditation teachers, and energy healers.

Michel Friedman has worked as a feminist and social development activist/facilitator across many sectors over 25 years. She works as part-time program manager for Gender at Work and is the facilitator for their South African program. She also runs a small practice training people about "body-sustainability," that is, ways of maintaining greater balance and harmony and dealing with fatigue, exhaustion, and trauma.

Jenny Horsman is a community-based adult educator/researcher based in Toronto. Her focus since 1990 has been the impact of violence on learning and how to teach survivors effectively. She has published widely including Too Scared to Learn: Women, Violence and Education (New Jersey: Lawrence Erlbaum Associates, 2000.) She is currently developing the innovative website www.learningandviolence.net in collaboration with allies in adult literacy and antiviolence movements across Canada and in the United States.

Lynne Hunt is emeritus professor, University of Southern Queensland, and adjunct professor, University of Western Australia. She is acknowledged nationally for teaching and received the Prime Minister's Award for Australian University Teacher of the Year in 2002. In 2009, she was awarded an Australian Executive Endeavour Award to work in Malaysia. She has taught in universities for 40 years and worked extensively in community-based initiatives promoting women's health.

Audrey Huntley is a wanderer, storyteller, documentary filmmaker, community researcher, and writer of mixed European settler and Indigenous ancestry. She grew up in Calgary, Alberta, went to university in France and Germany, and returned to Turtle Island in 1998 to work for the decolonization of lands, hearts, minds, and souls. Audrey is the founder of Wolf Dog Productions based in Toronto.

Salma Ismail is senior lecturer at University of Cape Town where she teaches Adult Education at all levels. She has taught literacy in communities and been an activist in worker and political movements. Her doctoral studies were on “poor women’s pedagogy” within a housing social movement.

Tobi Jacobi is an associate professor of Composition and Rhetoric and the director of the Community Literacy Center within the English Department, Colorado State University. She teaches a weekly writing workshop at the local jail called the SpeakOut! Women’s Writing Workshop. Since 2001, her research has focused on community literacies, particularly the conditions and challenges faced by incarcerated juvenile and women writers.

Deborah Kaercher has worked as a community-based advocate for over 20 years in low-income housing and women’s health. She was the founding director of the Women and Family Health Information Network in South Texas, an intersectoral collaboration focusing on women’s health communications and education. Deborah serves on an advisory board of the Health Policy Center at the University of Hawai’i, and the Pacific Writers Connection.

Katt Lissard, a writer and theater artist, teaches in the Individualized Masters Program at Goddard College, Vermont. Her work as a 2005 Fulbright scholar in Lesotho, researching theatrical responses to the AIDS pandemic, led to formation, in 2006, of the Winter/Summer Institute, a transnational, biennial theater project, of which she is artistic director (www.maketheatre.org). In 2012, on another Fulbright to Lesotho, she will begin work creating a performance/installation project about dams, water, environment, place, and community.

Linzi Manicom is the Service Learning Program coordinator and teaches community engagement, and academic and reflective writing at New College, University of Toronto. She previously taught in Women/Gender Studies in the areas of transnational feminism, gender and development, state theory, feminist pedagogy and organizing. She has published articles on feminist theoretical approaches to South Africa’s transition to postapartheid.

Anika Meckesheimer is a researcher at the Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana—Xochimilco in Mexico City, working on collective “systematization of experience” with feminist organizations in Chiapas. She is concerned with dialogue between academic feminist theory and everyday life in NGOs. Since 2002, she has been in the network against violence and for women’s rights in Chiapas, focusing on the impact of international development cooperation on internal group dynamics.

Dorine Plantenga, based in the Netherlands, is a trainer and consultant in gender, identity, conflict, and development issues, with over 25 years experience, worldwide. Her main interest is in facilitating processes of change for gender equality at personal, organizational, and political levels. She is currently working on documenting the methodological principles underlying her facilitation.

Elizabeth J. Tisdell is professor of Adult Education at Penn State Harrisburg and coordinator of the Adult Education Doctoral Program. She is author of Exploring Spirituality and Culture in Adult and Higher Education (US: Jossey-Bass/Wiley, 2003), and the coeditor (with Ann Swartz) of the recent sourcebook (2011) Adult Education and the Pursuit of Wisdom, part of the New Directions for Adult and Continuing Education series published by Jossey-Bass.

Jane West Walsh has served as a Jewish and Adult Educator since 1985 in a variety of contexts, including synagogues, Jewish day schools, Jewish communal organizations, nature centers, and inter-religious learning organizations. She currently serves as the executive director of PARDeS: Progressive Association of Reform Day Schools and as the Day School Specialist for the Union for Reform Judaism. She is based in Baltimore, MD, United States.

Shirley Walters is professor of Adult and Continuing Education and director of Division for Lifelong Learning at University of Western Cape, South Africa. She has been active in civil society and other organizations, nationally and internationally, for many years in promotion of feminist approaches to adult and lifelong learning.

Barbara Williams has been consulting with feminist, women's, and social justice organizations in Canada and internationally for many years. She is an activist-educator and cofounder of No More Silence, an indigenous and ally network in Canada to highlight ongoing colonization and impunity surrounding deaths and disappearances of many indigenous women in Canada. She coordinates a North/South antiviolence network of organizations and groups in Canada and Mexico.
