CONTRIBUTORS

Emilie Amt is the Hildegarde Pilgram Professor of History at Hood College. She received her DPhil from Oxford. She is the editor of several sourcebooks including Women's Lives in Medieval Europe: A Sourcebook; coeditor of Dialogus de Scaccario/The Dialogue of the Exchequer; and author of The Accession of Henry II in England, 1149–1159. She is currently editing the Latin cartulary of Godstow Abbey and writing a history of the convent.

Nicole Archambeau is a graduate of the University of California, Santa Barbara, and an ACLS New Faculty Fellow at Caltech. Her research explores the cultural construction of emotion in the late Middle Ages, especially the intersection of medicine and spirituality in the healing of emotional distress. She uses canonization inquest testimony in conjunction with medical texts and notarial records to contextualize expressions of emotion in the Mediterranean West.

Anne Reiber DeWindt is a fellow of the Royal Historical Society and teaches at the University of Detroit–Mercy. She is coauthor of Royal Justice and the Medieval English Countryside, and Ramsey: The Lives of an English Fenland Town, 1200–1600. She has written articles on the social history of the medieval English peasant, witchcraft, and an essay in Women Medievalists and the Academy, edited by Jane Chance.

Theresa Earenfight, professor of History at Seattle University, specializes in medieval queens and queenship. She is the author of The King's Other Body: María of Castile and the Crown of Aragon (2009) and “Doing without the Persona of the Prince? Kings, Queens, and the Idea of Monarchy in Medieval Europe” (2007), and editor of Queenship and Political Power in Medieval and Early Modern Spain (2005) and Women and Wealth in Late Medieval Europe (2010).

Katherine L. French is the J. Frederick Hoffman Chair of Medieval English History at the University of Michigan. In addition to articles on women's history, she is the author of two monographs People of the Parish: Community Life in a Late Medieval English Diocese and The Good Women of the Parish: Gender and Religion after the Black Death. She is co-author with Allyson Poska of the two-volume Women and Gender in the Western Past, 2 vols.

Valerie L. Garver is associate professor of History at Northern Illinois University where she teaches medieval history and medieval studies. She is the author of Women and Aristocratic Culture in the Carolingian World (Cornell University Press, 2009). Currently she is working on a new book project entitled The Meanings and Uses of Dress and Textiles in the Carolingian World, c. 715–c. 915.

Charlotte Newman Goldy is associate professor of History at Miami University. She is the author of The Anglo-Norman Nobility in the Reign of Henry I. The Second Generation, “The Shiftiness of a Woman: Narrativizing the Anstey Case” in Historical Reflections/Réflexions historiques and “A Thirteenth-Century Anglo-Jewish Woman Crossing Boundaries: Visible and Invisible.”

Amy Livingstone is a professor of History of Wittenberg University and co-editor of the journal Medieval Prosopography. She is the author of Out of Love for My Kin: Aristocratic Family Life in the Lands of the Loire, 1000–1200 (2010) and the co-editor of Medieval Monks: Ideals and Realities: Essays in Honor of Richard E. Sullivan and has written several essays and articles examining the experience of French aristocratic women and family life.

Jonathan R. Lyon is assistant professor of Medieval History at the University of Chicago. His research interests focus on the history of the German nobility and the Holy Roman Empire. He has published articles in the Journal of Medieval History and German History. He is also completing a book-length study of the role of sibling relationships in German politics during the twelfth and thirteenth centuries.

Linda E. Mitchell is the Martha Jane Phillips Starr/Missouri Distinguished Professor of Women’s and Gender Studies and professor of History at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, and the senior editor of the journal Historical Reflections/Réflexions Historiques. Recent contributions include Family Life in the Middle Ages; she is also the co-editor of The Ties that Bind: Essays in Medieval British History in Honor of Barbara Hanawalt. She is preparing a book-length study on Joan de Valence, Lady of Pembroke and Wexford.

Christian Raffensperger is assistant professor of History at Wittenberg University. He works on Russian integration into the wider medieval world, focusing on dynastic marriage, and has published several articles on the subject and a monograph Reimagining Europe: Kievan Rus' in the Medieval World.

Jamie Smith is an independent scholar. She is author of “Legal Protection for Wives of Absent Husbands in Late Fourteenth-Century Genoa,” in Worth and Repute: Valuing Gender in Late Medieval and Early Modern Europe Essays in Honour of Barbara Todd, edited by Kim Kippen and Lori Woods. Her research interests include premodern families, law, gender, and exile.

Rebecca Lynn Winer is associate professor of History at Villanova University. Her first book, Women, Wealth, and Community in Perpignan, c. 1250–1300: Christians, Jews, and Enslaved Muslims in a Medieval Mediterranean Town, appeared in 2006. She is currently working on breastfeeding and childcare in medieval Roussillon and Catalonia, where she has branched out from the town and into the countryside since many peasant women served as wet nurses.
