She coedits a major literature series for Continuum.

Candace Barrington is Professor of Medieval Literature at Central Connecticut State University. She has written American Chaucers (2007) and coedited, with Emily Steiner (University of Pennsylvania), Letter of the Law: Legal Practice and Literary Production in Medieval England (2002). She has also published many articles for, amongst others, Sex and Sexuality in a Feminist World (2009), American Literary History (2009), European Journal of English Studies (2011), Dark Chaucers (2012), Gower at 600 (2010) and Theorizing Legal Personhood in Late Medieval England (forthcoming).

Brantley L. Bryant is Assistant Professor of English at Sonoma State University. He has published articles in The Chaucer Review, postmedieval, and Studies in Medieval and Renaissance History, as well as the book Geoffrey Chaucer Hath a Blog (Palgrave, Macmillan, 2010).

Lesley Coote is lecturer in Medieval and Early Modern Studies at the University of Hull where she specializes in teaching medieval romance literature and culture, and medievalisms (including digital medievalisms, historical film and the “medieval/renaissance” novel). She is the author of Prophecy and Public Affairs in Later Medieval England (Woodbridge: Boydell and Brewer/York Medieval Texts, 2000), an edition of Geoffrey Chaucer’s Canterbury Tales (Wordsworth, 2003) which she is currently revising, and a wide variety of articles on the subject of political prophecy, medieval/Arthurian romance and the medievalism of film.

Louise D’Arcens teaches in the English Literatures Program at the University of Wollongong, New South Wales, Australia. She is author of Old Songs in the Timeless Land: Medievalism in Australian Literature 1840–1910 (Brepols / University of Western Australia Press, 2011) and Laughing at the Middle Ages: Comic Medievalism (Boydell and Brewer, forthcoming), and is coeditor of Maistresse of My Wit: Medieval Women, Modern Writers (Brepols, 2004) and The Unsocial Sociability of Women's Lifewriting (Palgrave, 2010).

Steve Ellis is Professor of English Literature at the University of Birmingham, and author of books on the modern reception of medieval writers such as Dante and English Poetry: Shelley to T. S. Eliot (1983) and Chaucer at Large: the Poet in the Modern Imagination (2000). He recently published Virginia Woolf and the Victorians (2007) and is finishing a monograph entitled The 1939 State: Literature and the Outbreak of World War II.

Steve Guthrie is Professor of English at Agnes Scott College. The essay in this volume is the latest in a series of essays on uses and misuses of the Middle Ages by American popular culture and US foreign and domestic policy. Other titles include “Torture, Inquisition, Medievalism, Reality, TV,” in Eileen Joy, et al., eds., Cultural Studies of the Modern Middle Ages, (Palgrave MacMillan, 2007), and “Medievalism and Orientalism,” Medieval Perspectives, 19 (2006).

Kathleen Coyne Kelly is Professor of English at Northeastern University. She coedited Queer Movie Medievalism (2009) and Menacing Virgins: Representing Virginity in the Middle Ages and Renaissance (1999) and also wrote Performing Virginity and Testing Chastity in the Middle Ages (2000).

Daniel T. Kline is Professor of English and Chair of the English Department at the University of Alaska, Anchorage. He has published essays in Mass Market Medievalism (MacFarland, 2007), Essays on Medieval Childhood (Shuan Tyas, 2007), Cultural Studies of the Modern Middle Ages (Palgrave, 2007), and Levinas and Medieval Literature (Duquesne, 2009), amongst others. He is the editor of Medieval Children's Literature (Routledge, 2003), and the Medieval British Literature Handbook (Continuum, 2009), as well as the author/webmaster of The Electronic Canterbury Tales <www.kankedort.net>.

Andrew Lynch is Professor in English and Cultural Studies at the University of Western Australia. With Helen Dell and Louise D'Arcens he edited a special issue of postmedieval, “The Medievalism of Nostalgia,” 2.2, 2011, including an essay on Walter Scott, and has recently published in Australian Literary Studies on the medievalism of Randolph Stow, and medievalist burlesque theatre in colonial Melbourne.

Philippa Semper is lecturer in Medieval English at the University of Birmingham. She is the author of Old English Poetry in Context (Continuum, forthcoming) as well as numerous articles and chapters such as “‘Byð se ealda man ceald and snoflig’: Stereotypes and Subversions of the Last Stages of the Life-Cycle in Old English Texts and Anglo-Saxon Contexts” in Medieval Lifecycles: Continuity and Change, ed. Isabelle Cochelin and Karen Smyth (Brepols, forthcoming) and “Old English Literature” in The English Literature Companion, ed. Julian Wolfreys, Palgrave Student Companions Series (Palgrave, 2010).

Robert S. Sturges is Professor and Associate Chair in the English Department at Arizona State University where he teaches medieval literature and queer studies. Recent books include Chaucer's Pardoner and Gender Theory: Bodies of Discourse (2000), Dialogue and Deviance: Male-Male Desire in the Dialogue Gerre (2005), and Law and Sovereignty in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance (2011). His current projects include a monograph on The Circulation of Power in Medieval Drama and, with Elizabeth Urquhart, an edition of The Middle English Pseudo-Augustinian Soliloquies and its Anti-Lollard Commentary.

Richard Utz is Professor of Medievalism Studies and Chair of the School of Literature, Media, and Communication at the Georgia Institute of Technology. Much of his scholarly work happens at the intersections of medieval culture, literature, and language and their reception in postmedieval times. Among his recent publications is an essay on “Coming to Terms with Medievalism: Toward a Conceptual History” for the European Journal of English Studies 15.2 (2011): 101–13, and a Festschrift for William Calin, Makers of the Middle Ages (Kalamazoo, MI: Studies in Medievalism, 2011), coedited with Elizabeth Emery. He is the current president of the International Society for the Study of Medievalism.

Angela Jane Weisl is Professor of English at Seton Hall University. She is the author of The Persistence of Medievalism: Narrative Adventures in Contemporary Culture (Palgrave/Macmillan, 2003), and Medievalisms: Making the Past in the Present, with Tison Pugh (Routledge, 2012), as well as several articles and book chapters on medieval subjects.
