

CONTRIBUTORS

Sharon Achinstein is Sir William Osler Professor of English Literature at Johns Hopkins University. The author of Literature and Dissent in Milton's England (2003), Milton and the Revolutionary Reader (1994), and coeditor of Milton and Toleration (2007), she is currently editing Milton's divorce tracts for Oxford University Press.

Ann Baynes Coiro, associate professor of English at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, is the author of Robert Herrick's Hesperides and the Epigram Book Tradition (1988), coeditor (with Thomas Fulton) of Rethinking Historicism from Shakespeare to Milton (2012), and (with Blair Hoxby) of Milton and the Long Restoration (forthcoming). Her articles on Milton include her 1998 James Holly Hanford Award winning essay. Her current book project is Milton in Stages: Reading, Performance and Interpretation.

Katharine Gillespie, associate professor of seventeenth-century English and Colonial American literature at Miami University of Ohio, specializes in writings by women associated with religious and political dissent. Her publications include Domesticity and Dissent in the Seventeenth-Century: English Women Writers and the Public Sphere (2004), as well as articles on Elizabeth Peter, Lucy Hutchinson, Elizabeth Cromwell, Mary Rowlandson, Anne Bradstreet, Katherine Chidley, and Anna Trapnel. She recently completed her monograph, Lucretia and Beyond: Women Write the English Republic 1625–1681.

Jonathan Goldberg is Arts and Sciences Distinguished Professor at Emory University. His most recent book is a monograph on Alfred Hitchcock's Strangers on a Train. An essay on Milton, "Samson Uncircumcised" was included in Political Theology and Early Modernity (2012); he is coeditor of a forthcoming volume on World-Making in Early Modern Literature.

Catharine Gray is associate professor of English at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. In addition to her first book, Women Writers and Public Debate in Seventeenth-Century Britain (2007), she has published articles on early modern women's writing and seventeenth-century war poetry. She is currently working on a monograph, Unmaking Britain: Poetry and War in the Seventeenth Century.

Feisal G. Mohamed is professor of English at The Graduate Center, CUNY. His most recent book, Milton and the Post-Secular Present: Ethics, Politics,

Terrorism (2011), received the Milton Society of America's James Holly Hanford Award. In addition to several scholarly journals, his writing has appeared in The New York Times, The New Republic, and Dissent Magazine.

Erin Murphy is associate professor of English and Women's, Gender and Sexuality Studies at Boston University. Her publications include Familial Forms: Politics and Genealogy in Seventeenth-Century English Literature (2011) and several articles on Milton. Her latest book project is Wartimes: Seventeenth-Century English Women's Writing and Its Afterlives.

Molly Murray is associate professor of English at Columbia University. She is the author of The Poetics of Conversion in Early Modern English Literature (2009), and numerous articles on early modern literature and culture. Her current book project is a study of prison writing from Wyatt to Milton.

Mary Nyquist, the Milton Society's Honored Scholar for 2011, is professor of English, Literature and Critical Theory, and Comparative Literature at the University of Toronto. She is currently working on two projects, one on embodied servility and liberty, one on a number of eighteenth century writers and the Age of Revolutions, both of which further explore Euro-colonialism and the racialized political discourses analyzed in her recent monograph, Arbitrary Rule: Slavery, Tyranny, and the Power of Life and Death (Chicago, 2013).

Diane Purkiss is professor of English at Oxford University. She works on the early modern supernatural, and on Milton, Marvell, politics, and gender. She is studying the place of masculinity in seventeenth-century manuscript transmission, and is researching a history of the writing process and its impediments. Her publications include Literature, Gender, and Politics during the English Civil War (2005) and The English Civil War: Papists, Gentlewomen, Soldiers and Witchfinders in the Birth of Modern Britain (2007).

Rachel Trubowitz is professor of English at the University of New Hampshire. She is the author of Nation and Nurture in Seventeenth-Century English Literature (2012); her book Milton and Mathematics is currently under consideration at Oxford University Press. She has just completed a term as the President of the Milton Society of America.

Christopher Warley teaches critical theory and Renaissance literature at the University of Toronto. He is the author of Reading Class through Shakespeare, Donne, and Milton (2014); and Sonnet Sequences and Social Distinction in Renaissance England (2005).

Reginald A. Wilburn is associate professor of English at the University of New Hampshire and summer faculty at the Institute for the Recruitment of Teachers. The author of Preaching the Gospel of Black Revolt: Appropriating Milton in Early African American Literature (2014), he has begun research that examines contemporary African Americans' Miltonic receptions in twentieth- and twenty-first-century literary productions.
