BIBLIOGRAPHY

Tamara Atkin is Lecturer in late medieval and early renaissance English literature at Queen Mary, University of London. She is the author of The Drama of Reform: Theology and Theatricality, 1461–1553 (Brepols, 2013), which examines the interactions between drama and religion in England before and during the Reformation. She is currently working on the form and function of manuscript and printed playbooks in the early and mid-Tudor periods, and her next project is a history of drama as literature in the century before the establishment of commercial playhouses in London in the 1570s.

Heather Blatt teaches English Literature at Florida International University. Her research focuses on questions of reading and book history in late medieval England, and she has published articles on medieval bookmarks and reading technologies. She is working on her first book, which draws on theories of audience participation that have emerged from the field of new media studies, and reconstructs overlooked modes of reading that both anticipated and shaped reader participation from the late fourteenth to the early sixteenth centuries.

Julia Boffey is Professor of Medieval Studies in the Department of English at Queen Mary, University of London. Her research mostly deals with aspects of the transmission and reception of literary texts ca. 1350–1550. She has edited a collection of Fifteenth-Century English Dream Visions (Oxford University Press, 2003), co-produced A New Index of Middle English Verse (British Library, 2005), and recently published a study of Manuscript and Print in London 1475–1530 (British Library, 2012). She has also published articles on Middle English lyrics, on fourteenth- and fifteenth-century verse and verse translation, on women’s literacy and reading in the Middle Ages, and on early printing in England.

Stephanie Downes has published on French and English texts and manuscripts from the later Middle Ages and their reception up to the present day. A graduate of the University of Sydney, in 2010–2011 she was a British Academy Visiting Scholar at Queen Mary, University of London, and a Mayers Fellow at the Huntington Library, San Marino. She is currently a postdoctoral fellow at the University of Melbourne in the ARC Centre of Excellence for the History of Emotions. With Andrew Lynch and Katrina O’Loughlin, she is the co-editor of Emotions and War: Medieval to Romantic Literature (Palgrave, 2015). Her work interrogates Anglo-French manuscript culture and linguistic exchange in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.

A. S. G. Edwards is Professor of Medieval English Manuscripts in the School of English, University of Kent. He has published extremely influential work on Chaucer, Lydgate, and other Middle English literatures as well as on bibliography, textual criticism, paleography and reading, and on manuscript and early printed book studies. Most recently he is the editor (with Julia Boffey) of A Companion to Fifteenth-Century Poetry (Boydell & Brewer, 2013) and (with Orietta da Rold) of English Manuscripts before 1400, English Manuscript Studies 16 (British Library, 2012).

Mary C. Flannery is maître assistante in medieval English at the University of Lausanne. She has held posts at the J. Paul Getty Museum in Los Angeles and at Queen Mary University of London. Her first monograph, John Lydgate and the Poetics of Fame (D. S. Brewer, 2012), focused on the works of fifteenth-century England’s greatest poet. With Katie Walter, she also co-edited The Culture of Inquisition in Medieval England, and she has authored a number of articles on medieval English literature and on the history of emotions.

Carrie Griffin is Lecturer in Early Modern Literature at the University of Limerick and Research Associate of the English Department, University of Bristol. She was Irish Research Council Marie Curie Research Fellow (2010–13) at Queen Mary, University of London, and National University of Ireland Fellow (2007–09) at University College Cork, Ireland. Her first monograph, The Middle English Wise Book of Philosophy and Astronomy: A Parallel-Text Edition (Heidelberg: Universitätsverlag Winter) was published in early 2013, and she is co-editor of the essay collection Readings on Audience and Textual Materiality (Pickering & Chatto, 2011). Her monograph on practical texts will come out with Ashgate in 2016, and she has published widely on manuscript and book history.

Ryan Perry is Lecturer in Medieval English Literature at the University of Kent. He previously was a postdoctoral researcher in the School of English, Queen’s University of Belfast, where he was employed on two large AHRC-funded projects; most recently, “Geographies of Orthodoxy” and previously, as Research Associate on the “Imagining History” project. Ryan’s work focuses in particular on devotional reading practices and on signs of reading and ownership of texts and books. He has published widely, with articles on the Vernon manuscript, the Middle English Pseudo-Bonaventuran tradition, and on communities of Christian readers, and he is currently working on several essay collections and projects, including a monograph on the material text for Brepols.

Daniel Sawyer is a DPhil candidate at the University of Oxford, where he is writing a thesis provisionally titled “‘Mast nedefull thynge’: The Uses of Manuscripts containing Religious Instructional Literature in England, c. 1350–1500.” He is particularly interested in the use of codicological evidence to extend and nuance the history of reading, and in the development of methodologies appropriate to large manuscript traditions. His other research interests include instances of penitential selfhood in romance texts and of sixteenth-century marginalia in medieval books.

Lawrence Tuck is a DPhil postgraduate from the University of Kent, and his thesis is entitled “The Development of Margery Kempe’s ‘maner of leuyng’: An Interplay of Oral and Literate Practices.” His interests lie in late medieval literate and oral cultures and their interaction with texts and books, and the devotional reading practices of lay people. He is currently working on the role of homilies and exempla in the teachings of Margery Kempe.

Daniel Wakelin is Jeremy Griffiths Professor of Medieval English Palaeography at the University of Oxford, and Executive Secretary of the Early English Text Society. He is co-editor with Alexandra Gillespie of The Production of Books in England 1350–1500 (2011) and author of Humanism, Reading and English Literature 1430–1530 (2007) and Correcting, Craft and Literary Criticism: English Manuscripts 1375–1510 (forthcoming).

Katie L. Walter is Lecturer in Medieval English Literature at the University of Sussex. She is the editor of two essay collections, Reading Skin in Medieval Literature and Culture (Palgrave, 2013), and (with Mary C. Flannery) The Culture of Inquisition in Medieval England (D. S. Brewer, 2013), and has authored articles on medieval literary theory, the body, and interiority. She is currently completing a monograph on the mouth in medieval traditions.
