Contributors

Daniel M. Abramson is associate professor of Art History and director of Architectural Studies at Tufts University. He is the author of Building the Bank of England: Money, Architecture, Society, 1694–1942 (Yale University Press, 2005) and Skyscraper Rivals: The AIG Building and the Architecture of Wall Street (Princeton Architectural Press, 2001). A recently completed book manuscript on the architectural history of obsolescence will be published in 2015 by the University of Chicago Press.

Hanjo Berressem teaches American Literature at the University of Cologne, Germany. His publications include Pynchon's Poetics: Interfacing Theory and Text (University of Illinois Press) and Lines of Desire: Reading Gombrowicz's Fiction with Lacan (Northwestern University Press). He has edited, together with Leyla Haferkamp, Deleuzian Events: Writing History (Lit, 2009) and site-specific: from aachen to zwölfkinder—pynchon|germany (Sondernummer der Pynchon Notes, 2008). He has just completed two “complementary” books, one on Gilles Deleuze called Crystal Philosophy and one on Félix Guattari called Crystal Science.

Bill Brown is the Karla Scherer Distinguished Professor in American Culture at the University of Chicago, where he teaches in the Department of English Language and Literature, the Department of Visual Arts, and the Chicago Center for Contemporary Theory. He has been a coeditor of Critical Inquiry since 1993. He published The Material Unconscious: American Amusement, Stephen Crane, and the Economies of Play (Harvard University Press) in 1996, and Reading the West: An Anthology of Dime Novels (Bedford) in 1997. He edited a special issue of Critical Inquiry on “Things” that appeared in the fall of 2001 and was expanded and published as a book (University of Chicago Press, 2004). A Sense of Things: The Object Matter of American Literature (University of Chicago Press) appeared in 2003. His next book, Other Things (University of Chicago Press), will be published in 2015.

Kathleen Fitzpatrick is director of Scholarly Communication of the Modern Language Association and visiting research professor of English at New York University. She is author of Planned Obsolescence: Publishing, Technology, and the Future of the Academy (New York University Press, 2011) and of The Anxiety of Obsolescence: The American Novel in the Age of Television (Vanderbilt University Press, 2006). She is cofounder of the digital scholarly network MediaCommons, where she has led a number of experiments in open peer review and other innovations in scholarly publishing.

John Durham Peters is A. Craig Baird Professor of Communication Studies and professor of International Studies at the University of Iowa. He is the author of Speaking into the Air: A History of the Idea of Communication (University of Chicago Press, 1999), Courting the Abyss: Free Speech and the Liberal Tradition (University of Chicago Press, 2005), and The Marvelous Clouds: Toward a Philosophy of Elemental Media (University of Chicago Press, 2015). He was a fellow at the Collegium for Advanced Studies at the University of Helsinki in 2013–2014, where he completed his chapter for this volume.

Jani Scandura is associate professor of English at the University of Minnesota and is affiliated with the Departments of American Studies and Cultural Studies and Comparative Literature. She is the author of Down in the Dumps: Place, Modernity, and American Depression (Duke University Press, 2008) and coeditor with Michael Thurston of Modernism, Inc.: Body, Memory, Capital (New York University Press, 2001). She is currently completing a new book, Proximity: Nearness and Similarity in the Age of Absolutes.

MaryAnn Snyder-Körber is currently a lecturer at the Georg-August-Universität Göttingen. She is the author of Das weiblich Erhabene: Sappho bis Baudelaire (2007) and is coeditor of The Pathos of Authenticity: American Passions of the Real (with Andrew S. Gross and Ulla Haselstein, 2010), Trauma's Continuum: September 11th Reconsidered (a 2011 special issue of Amerikastudien/American Studies with Andrew S. Gross), and Machine: Bodies, Genders, Technologies (with M. Michaela Hampf, 2012). She has just completed a book-length study titled "Modernism in American Centuries: Henry James, T. S. Eliot, James Baldwin, Djuna Barnes" that considers internationally profiled modernist authorship within the context of Americanization.

Alexander Starre is postdoctoral associate at the John F. Kennedy Institute for North American Studies at the Free University Berlin, where he works on American cultural history, practices of knowledge creation, media theory, and print culture. His first book Metamedia: American Book Fictions and Literary Print Culture after Digitization is forthcoming with University of Iowa Press in 2015. Recent publications include articles on the work of Mark Z. Danielewski, Dave Eggers, and Chris Ware. He is currently at work on a new project, tentatively titled “Knowledge Cultures: Shapes, Styles, and Traces of Intellect in Professionalized America, 1878–1929.”

Susan Strasser, Richards Professor of American History Emerita at the University of Delaware, has been praised by the New Yorker for “retrieving what history discards: the taken-for-granted minutiae of everyday life.” Her books include Never Done: A History of American Housework (1982), Satisfaction Guaranteed: The Making of the American Mass Market (1989); and Getting and Spending: European and American Consumer Societies in the Twentieth Century (with Charles McGovern and Matthias Judt, 1998). Her Waste and Want: A Social History of Trash (1999), was an early contribution to research on the relationship of modernity and waste. She is currently working on A Historical Herbal, an account of medicinal herbs in American culture.

Babette B. Tischleder is professor of North American Studies at the University of Göttingen. She is the author of Body Trouble: Entkörperlichung, Whiteness und das amerikanische Gegenwartskino (2001), a book on embodiment, theories of race, and contemporary cinema. Her book The Literary Life of Things: Case Studies in American Fiction (Campus, 2014) engages with new materialist thought and discusses texts from Harriet Beecher Stowe to Jonathan Franzen. She has published articles on American literature, media culture, film and television studies, and thing theory. Her current research projects are “Life Forms of the Nonhuman from Early Cinema to the Digital Age” and “World Building in American Serial Television.”

William Uricchio is professor of Comparative Media Studies at MIT, where he heads both the Open Documentary Lab and the MIT Game Lab, and professor of Comparative Media History at Utrecht University (Netherlands). A recipient of Guggenheim, Fulbright, and Humboldt fellowships and the Berlin Prize, Uricchio publishes widely on such topics as the history of “old” media when they were “new,” the cultural work of algorithms, and interactivity in the documentary form.

Sarah Wasserman is assistant professor of English at the University of Delaware. She received her PhD from Princeton University in 2013 and previously taught at the JFK Institute for North American Studies at the Free University of Berlin. Her work appears in Contemporary Literature, Modern Fiction Studies, The Journal of American Studies, and Research in English and American Literature. She is currently at work on a book about literary representations of ephemeral objects in American culture from the beginning of the twentieth century until today.
