Business as Usual Small Changes for the Long haul Sustainable Future

We continue to believe in economic arguments that ignore the social and environmental dimension. We continue to think that our way of life is sustainable and are not prepared to manage the risks of climate change by changing our way of life. We blame the increasing risk of drought, bush fires and floods are one-off, unrelated events or deny that climate change can mean rising temperatures in some areas and plummeting temperatures in others. Melting ice effects the ocean currents. The sea is used as a dumping ground and it no longer helps to regulate our climate

3. Please listen to audios of the scenarios; Please choose one that you most identify with by clicking the button in the bottom section

The audio tool at the bottom of the section will allow you to listen to the recording of the text. The appearance differs from computer to computer depending on what you use for your web browser.

Pathway To Wellbeing

The screenshot shows the 'Pathway To Wellbeing' application interface. At the top, there are navigation buttons for 'Home', 'Log Out', and a 'Print' icon. Below this is a progress indicator with three steps: '1 Edit', '2 Edit', and '3 Edit'. The main content area is divided into three sections: 'Concepts', 'Needs', and 'Haves'. Each section has an 'Edit' button and a 'Find' button. The 'Concepts' section contains a list of ideas such as 'great and useful health', 'Energy use code', and 'Efficiency of green technology'. The 'Needs' section contains a list of needs such as 'Family committed to maximizing the use of electricity & water', 'High cost for anything that saves energy', and 'Cost of installing sun water tanks'. The 'Haves' section contains a list of resources such as 'Use less electricity', 'Holding up toilets to privatize tanks (discussing some planning)', and 'Reduce meat intake'. Callout boxes provide instructions: 'Expand or collapse the list' points to the blue plus symbol in the 'Concepts' section; 'Search concepts' points to the search bar in the 'Concepts' section; 'Highlight concept and click here to add new idea' points to the 'Add (New)' button in the 'Concepts' section.

4. After completing step 3, you will arrive at this screen. The top section lets you navigate between the 3 sections “Have Need”, “In Basket, Out Basket” and “Turning Points and Barrier”.

It is perhaps best to start with identifying what you have and what you need in life. Select the have and need section if it is not already selected. Here you will be able to personalise your pathway by selecting the items in “Concepts” section on the left.

5. In the concept area the blue plus symbol expands the list. You can also search for the concept in the find box by typing a word in and press “find”. If you can’t find a concept you would like, you can add in your own words to the social, economic and environmental as a sub item, in order to personalise it with your experiences, emotions and perceptions.

If something is not there, then add your own ideas to the drop-down lists under social, economic and environmental tabs, e.g. I want to add to In Basket ‘improve insulation’. I will add it to the list by placing it under “Social”, as a subsection of “home”. But if I want to I could add it under Economic as “I cannot afford to insulate my home. The subsection you decide to choose depends on whether you consider an item to be social, economic or environmental.

6. Personalise your profile by using the green plus sign to add your highlighted concept and using the red minus sign to delete items that do not apply to you.

7. Save each step by clicking on the save button if you would like, however this is done automatically.
