Since the essays in this volume represent the work of some fifteen years, it may be appropriate to acknowledge some long-term debts. In my work on Husserl I have learned from many philosophers and met many fine people. Five of these, whom I have been privileged to know as teachers, senior colleagues, mentors and friends, unite philosophical and human qualities in superlative fashion. They are: Herbert Spiegelberg, J.N. Findlay, Paul Ricœur, J.N. Mohanty, and the late Aron Gurwitsch. Personally, temperamentally and even philosophically they are as far apart as their diverse places of origin – Germany, South Africa, France, India, Russia. What brings them together is more than their conviction that interpreting Husserl is a worthwhile part of their philosophical endeavors. In doing so their abiding concern is never 'scholarship' but what Husserl called die Sachen selbst, to which they are utterly devoted without guile or vanity. Their importance and depth as philosophers and teachers is complemented by a rare generosity of spirit of which I have been one of the many beneficiaries.
