CO-EDITORS:

Patrick Burke is associate professor of philosophy at Seattle University. In recent autumns, he has been adjunct associate professor at Gonzaga University in Florence, Italy. An invited research fellow at the Institute of Philosophy of the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven in 1976 and in 1990, he publishes in the area of contemporary French philosophy, and is presently completing a book on Merleau-Ponty and Schelling.

Jan Van der Veken is Professor of philosophy at the Institute of Philosophy, Katholieke Universiteit Leuven (Belgium). He wrote a doctoral dissertation on The Absolute in the Philosophy of Maurice Merleau-Ponty. He has published extensively on Process Thought and is the chairperson of the European Society for Process Thought. At Leuven, he is the Director of the Center for Metaphysics and Philosophy of God. He also has published in the area of phenomenology and religious language.

CONTRIBUTORS

Rudolf Bernet was educated at the Universities of Louvain and Heidelberg. He holds a Ph.D. from Leuven (1976). He is presently Professor of Philosophy Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, member of the Board of Directors of the Husserl-Archives and editor of the series Edmund Husserl, Collected Works. He has edited texts by Husserl, translated texts by Heidegger and written numerous articles on Husserl, Heidegger, Merleau-Ponty, Derrida, Freud and Lacan. He is the author of Introduction to Husserlian Phenomenology, Northwestern University Press, 1992 (in collaboration with I. Kern and E. Marbach). His main interests are temporality, imagination, language, and more recently the philosophy of the (non-egological) subject.

Laura Boella teaches the history of moral philosophy at Università Statale di Milano. She is the author of Il giovane Lukács (1977), Intellettuali e coscienza di classe. Il dibattito su Lukács 1923–24 (1977), and several essays on the last phase of Lukácsian thought. She has edited the Italian edition of numerous writings of the “School of Budapest” (a group of students of Lukács who constituted the most important nucleus of opposition in Hungary during the ’60’s and the ’70’s), including La filosofia radicale by Ágnes Heller (1987) and Sistemi sociali oltre Marx by Mihály Vajda (1980). In 1987 she published Ernst Bloch. Trame della speranza (Jaca Book, Milano) and in 1988 Dietro il paesaggio. Saggio su Simmel (UNICOPLI, Milano). She has also brought-out the Italian edition of several important works of Ernst Bloch: Tracce (1989), Geographica (1991), and Eredità del nostro tempo (1992). She has published on the phenomenology of Hannah Arendt and is currently working on a book on the philosophy of Hannah Arendt.

Françoise Dastur is “Maître de conférences” at the Université de Paris-I (Panthéon-Sorbonne) in the Department of Philosophy where she teaches general philosophy and the history of philosophy with an emphasis on German philosophy. In addition, she is attached to the Phenomenological Seminar, a research unit of the “Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique” (C.N.R.S.). She has published several articles in French and English on Husserl, Heidegger, and Merleau-Ponty. She is the author of Heidegger et la question du temps (1990) and of Hölderlin. Tragédie et modernité (1992).

M. C. Dillon is professor of philosophy at Binghamton University, author of Merleau-Ponty’s Ontology (1988), and editor of Merleau-Ponty Vivant (1991). He is currently completing work on a book entitled Semiological Reductionism: A Critique of Derrida.

Galen A. Johnson is professor of philosophy at the University of Rhode Island, author of Earth and Sky, History and Philosophy: Island Images Inspired by Husserl and Merleau-Ponty (1989), and co-editor of Ontology and Alterity in Merleau-Ponty (1990).

Burkhard Liebsch teaches in the Department of Philosophy at the Ruhr-University of Bochum. He has published articles on Merleau-Ponty and his relationship to the history of science, Foucault, and Ricoeur, and, most recently, a book on Piaget and Merleau-Ponty, Spuren einer anderen Natur. Piaget, Merleau-Ponty und die ontogenetischen Prozesse.

Gary Brent Madison is professor of philosophy at McMaster University. He is author of La phénoménologie de Merleau-Ponty, une recherche des limites de la conscience (1973; English trans. 1981), Understanding: A Phenomenological-Pragmatic Analysis (1982), The Logic of Liberty (1986), and The Hermeneutics of Postmodernity: Figures and Themes (1989). In addition to numerous journal articles on contemporary continental philosophy, Madison's interest in the hermeneutics of the social sciences has also led him to write in the areas of political and economic theory. He is a founding member and former director of the Canadian Society for Hermeneutics and Postmodern Thought.

Marc Richir, a Senior Research Fellow with the Belgian National Fund for Scientific Research (FNRS), is a tenured lecturer at the Université Libre de Bruxelles. In addition, he is director of the curriculum at the Collège International de Philosophie. He is author of numerous works in contemporary continental thought, notably La crise du sens et la phénoménologie (1990) and Du sublime en politique (1991). He also serves as editor of the collection "Krisis" for the Jérôme Millon publishing house of Grenoble.

James Risser is associate professor of philosophy and the current holder of the Pigott-McCone Chair of Humanities at Seattle University. In addition to several publications in the area of hermeneutics, he is editor of a forthcoming volume of essays on Heidegger's work from the 1930's. At present, he is completing a book on Gadamer's hermeneutics.

Rudi Visker is Senior Research Fellow at the Institute of Philosophy, Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, under the auspices of the Belgian National Fund for Scientific Research, and Fellow of the University of Essex. In addition to several publications in the philosophy of economics and in modern and contemporary philosophy, he is author of Michel Foucault. Genealogie als Kritik (München, 1991).

Bernhard Waldenfels is professor of philosophy at the Ruhr-University of Bochum, and has lectured as a visiting professor in various university cities, including Rotterdam, Paris, New York, Rome, Louvain-la-Neuve, San José (Costa Rica), and Debrecen. He has authored a number of books, including Das Zwischenreich des Dialogs (1971), Der Spielraum des Verhaltens (1980), Phänomenologie in Frankreich (1983), In den Netzen der Lebenswelt (1985), Ordnung im Zwielflicht (1987), and Der Stachel des Fremden (1990). He is the German translator and editor of several books by Merleau-Ponty, and, in collaboration with A. Métraux, edited a volume of essays on Merleau-Ponty: Leibhaftige Vernunft: Spuren von Merleau-Ponty's Denken (1986).

Stephen Watson is associate professor of philosophy at the University of Notre Dame and has published widely in recent French philosophy. He is especially interested in poststructuralist thought.

Edwin Weihe is associate professor of English and former academic dean at Seattle University where he currently teaches interdisciplinary courses on modernism and postmodernism. He is an award-winning teacher, a published fiction writer and poet, and a Fulbright scholar who has lectured widely in Europe on American fiction. Each summer in Paris, he conducts a popular course on expatriate artists and writers.

TRANSLATORS:

R. Philip Buckley is visiting assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Saskatchewan, and author of Husserl, Heidegger, and the Crisis of Philosophical Responsibility (1992).

René Maxime Marinoni is professor of French at Seattle University, and has published in the area of foreign language instruction. A native of Grenoble, he is one of the principal founders and directors of Seattle University's French-in-France program.

Paul B. Milan is associate professor of French at Seattle University, and has published in the areas of French literature and foreign language development. In collaboration with Patrick Burke and Andrew Bjelland, Jr., he is bringing forth the English edition of Merleau-Ponty's L'union de l'âme et du corps chez Malebranche, Biran et Bergson.

Victor Reinking is assistant professor of French at Seattle University, and is finishing a Ph.D. dissertation on Jean-Jacques Rousseau at the University of Washington; he is active in translating the French language works of North African writers.
