Author Bios

Mario Carrassi is Associate Professor of International Management in the University of Bari – Aldo Moro – Italy and Visiting Professor in the University of South Australia – UniSA.

Erich C. Fein is a lecturer and Program Director at the Centre for Human Resource Management in the School of Management, Division of Business at the University of South Australia. Erich served as an intelligence officer and survival instructor in the US military. He received his Ph.D. in industrial/organizational psychology from the Ohio State University. His research focuses on performance management, personnel selection, leadership development, and managerial ethics. His publications have appeared in the International Journal of Selection and Assessment, Research in Personnel and Human Resources Management, and the Journal of Management Development.

Patricia Grant is a senior lecturer in the Faculty of Business & Law at AUT University, Auckland New Zealand. She is interested in the philosophical foundations of business and management. Her areas of research include virtue ethics and corporate governance.

Howard Harris is Associate Head of School: Research in the School of Management at the University of South Australia. His main interest is in the relevance of classical virtues in contemporary management. He is a Past President of the Australian Association for Professional and Applied Ethics.

Peter McGhee is a senior lecturer in the Centre for Business Interdisciplinary Studies in the Faculty of Business & Law at Auckland University of Technology in New Zealand where he teaches business ethics and management. His research interests include spirituality in the workplace, the ethics of organisations and virtue ethics. He has previously published in the Australian Journal of Professional & Applied Ethics, the Global Virtue Ethics Review and Electronic Journal of Business Ethics & Organization Studies.
Stephen McKenzie was awarded a PhD in English from the University of South Australia in 2000. His doctoral research focused on conceptions of Asia in the medieval and early modern periods. He has undertaken research on the social aspects of sustainability. He is developing an interest in the intersection between religious ethics and social sustainability and has published in that area. He lived for a time in the Solomon Islands and now lives in Papua New Guinea where he cares for his two young children.

Geoff Moore is Professor of Business Ethics at Durham Business School, Durham University, UK. He has published in a range of internationally recognised journals including Organization Studies, Business Ethics Quarterly and the Journal of Business Ethics. He is a member of the editorial boards of Business Ethics Quarterly and Business Ethics: a European Review, and previously of the Journal of Business Ethics. In addition to work on Fair Trade, his research has focused mainly on the application of virtue ethics to business organizations, drawing particularly on the work of Alasdair MacIntyre.

Denis Anthony (Tony) O’Malley B.Tech, MBA, PhD, OAM is an Adjunct Research Fellow in the School of Management at University of South Australia. He holds an Order of Australia Medal (OAM) for community service. His research interests include ethics, regional development and innovation. He had a thirty year career in international consulting.

Chris Provis originally studied and taught philosophy, and then worked in industrial relations for some years before joining the School of Management at the University of South Australia. He has published two books and a number of journal articles in philosophy, industrial relations and business ethics.

Helen Rusak BA Hons. MA, PhD has presented and published on the arts, music and new media. She has broad experience in arts management practice and has held senior government advisory roles. One outcome of her time as acting director of the Arts and Cultural Management program at the University of South Australia was an industry placement project developing a national indigenous arts festival.

Michael Schwartz is an associate professor of business ethics in the School of Economics, Finance & Marketing at the Royal Melbourne Institute of Technology. He is a past president of the Australian Association for Professional and Applied Ethics. He is a member of the editorial boards of the Journal of Applied Ethics and the Journal of International Business & Law; and a joint editor of Research in Ethical Issues in Organizations.

Gayathri (Gee) Wijesinghe is a lecturer in the field of Tourism, Hospitality and Events at the School of Management at the University of South Australia. Originally from Sri Lanka, she has been studying and working in Australia for the last twenty years. She is a Hermeneutic Phenomenologist in the ‘expressive’ tradition. Her PhD thesis explored the everyday experiences and challenges of receptionist work. This then led to subsequent explorations of the embodied dimensions of tourism/hospitality work (i.e. cultural, emotional, gendered especially in terms of sexualised labour), and more recently to virtue ethics as a framework for sustainable practice and pedagogy.

Tracy Wilcox is a lecturer in the School of Management at the University of New South Wales. Tracy researches in business ethics, sustainability education and critical realist organizational theory. She has published internationally in the areas of HRM, CSR and business ethics education. Prior to her academic appointments, Tracy worked in industry as a management development consultant and as an analytical chemist, developing her interest in ethics while working in the chemical manufacturing industry.