

THE PUBLIC INTELLECTUALISM OF RALPH WALDO
EMERSON AND W.E.B. DU BOIS

Cognitive Studies in Literature and Performance

Engaging Audiences
Bruce McConachie

Literature, Science, and a New Humanities
Jonathan Gottschall

The Public Intellectualism of Ralph Waldo Emerson and W.E.B. Du Bois
Ryan Schneider

The Public Intellectualism of Ralph Waldo Emerson and
W.E.B. Du Bois

Emotional Dimensions of Race and Reform

Ryan Schneider

palgrave
macmillan

THE PUBLIC INTELLECTUALISM OF RALPH WALDO EMERSON AND W.E.B. DU BOIS
Copyright © Ryan Schneider, 2010.
Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2010 978-0-230-61884-8

The author gratefully acknowledges permission to publish portions of the manuscript (in some cases now revised) that have appeared in essay form in the following edited collections:

From "Fathers, Sons, Sentimentality, and the Color-Line: The Not-Quite-Separate Spheres of W.E.B. Du Bois and Ralph Waldo Emerson," in No More Separate Spheres!: A Next Wave American Studies Reader, Cathy N. Davidson and Jessamyn Hatcher, eds., pp. 355–375. Copyright 2002, Duke University Press. All rights reserved. Reprinted with permission of the publisher.

From "How to Be a (Sentimental) Race Man: Mourning and Passing in W.E.B. Du Bois's The Souls of Black Folk," in Boys Don't Cry? Rethinking Narratives of Masculinity and Emotion in America, Jennifer Travis and Milette Shamir, eds., pp. 106–123. Copyright 2002, Columbia University Press. All rights reserved. Reprinted with permission of the publisher.

All rights reserved.

First published in 2010 by
PALGRAVE MACMILLAN®
in the United States—a division of St. Martin's Press LLC, 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010.

Where this book is distributed in the UK, Europe and the rest of the world, this is by Palgrave Macmillan, a division of Macmillan Publishers Limited, registered in England, company number 785998, of Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS.

Palgrave Macmillan is the global academic imprint of the above companies and has companies and representatives throughout the world.

Palgrave® and Macmillan® are registered trademarks in the United States, the United Kingdom, Europe and other countries.

ISBN 978-1-349-38155-5 ISBN 978-0-230-10565-2 (eBook)
DOI 10.1057/9780230105652

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Schneider, Ryan.

The public intellectualism of Ralph Waldo Emerson and W.E.B. Du Bois : emotional dimensions of race and reform / Ryan Schneider.

p. cm. — (Cognitive studies in literature and performance)

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-1-349-38155-5 (alk. paper)

1. American literature—19th century—History and criticism.
2. American literature—20th century—History and criticism.
3. Emerson, Ralph Waldo, 1803–1882—Political and social views.
4. Du Bois, W. E. B. (William Edward Burghardt), 1868–1963—Political and social views.
5. Racism in literature.
6. Reformation in literature.
7. African Americans in literature. I. Title.

PS169.R28S66 2010
810.9'355—dc22

2009030394

A catalogue record of the book is available from the British Library.

Design by Newgen Imaging Systems (P) Ltd., Chennai, India.

First edition: March 2010

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

For Dorrie, Mally, and Emmy

This page intentionally left blank

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction: The Province of Public Intellectualism: Emerson, Du Bois, Emotion, and Reform Writing	1
1 Race: You'll Know It When You Feel It	23
2 Double Consciousness: It's More Than What You Think	49
3 Losing Your Head: Why Du Bois and Emerson (Mostly) Like John Brown	71
4 Intimate Attachments: Fathers, Sons, and Public Intellectuals	93
Conclusion: Theory of Mind and the Color Line	121
Notes	143
Bibliography	165
Index	179

This page intentionally left blank

Acknowledgments

Completing this book would not have been possible without the help of a multitude of mentors, friends, and family members. First and foremost, I must thank Cathy N. Davidson. If not for her knowledge, creative energy, and editorial acumen, I would never have been able to bring Emerson and Du Bois together.

Equally deserving of thanks are: Lawrence Buell, who first led me to Emerson, who kindly and expertly continues to respond to my (still clumsy) scholarly efforts; and whose research I return to again and again for insights and guidance; Thomas J. Ferraro, whose seminars pushed me to explore the relationship between intellect and emotion and whose keen ear and unflagging passion helped me understand why scholarship has to be personal as well as public; Karla F.C. Holloway, whose hard questions about autobiography and willingness to share her work on African American mourning practices redirected and enriched my approach to writing about race and loss; Robert Paul Lamb, who was there at the beginning, whose abundance of personality is unmatched by anyone anywhere, and who continues to show me why art and craft matter; Michael Moon, who provided essential comments and insights throughout the early stages of this project; Dana D. Nelson, whose invaluable scholarship and generous mentorship I deeply cherish; and William Anthony Nericcio, fellow traveler (to destinations local and exotic), artful performer, and academic godfather who mixes work and play in mutually beneficial ways.

Much gratitude is due to the many other friends and colleagues who graciously shared their thoughts and critiques and allowed me to share mine: Kristina Bross, Jeffory Clymer, June Cummins, Susan Curtis, John Duvall, Wendy Stallard Flory, Gayle Iwamasa, Christopher Lukasik (despite his misplaced basketball allegiances), Howard Mancing, Daniel Morris, Bill Mullen, Venetria Patton, Nancy J. Peterson, Charles Ross, Margaret Moan Rowe, Aparajita Sagar, María Carla Sánchez, G.R. Thompson, and Bonnie Wheeler. I also want to acknowledge the support of my former and current department heads, Thomas Adler and Irwin Weiser, respectively, as well as that of my colleagues in Purdue's Cognitive Literary Studies Group, Early American Reading Group, and American Studies Program.

Other timely assistance has come in the form of research grants and teaching releases from the College of Liberal Arts at Purdue; the Purdue Research Foundation; the San Diego State University Research Foundation; the SDSU Department of English and Comparative Literature; and the National Endowment for the Humanities. Much credit and gratitude also are due to Lee Norton, Brigitte Shull, and the rest of the wonderfully patient and highly professional editorial and production staff at Palgrave Macmillan.

It has been a joy and honor to work with many graduate students, past and present, whose research interests and enthusiasm for exploring new fields, methods, and questions have helped shape this book's arguments. Particularly deserving of acknowledgment and appreciation are Chris Abreu (Cheap Buffets & Operation Pedro Pan); Mary Barford (Emerson & More Emerson); Mark Bousquet (Water & Whalemen); Leslie Hammer (SDSU & UCSD); Jamie Hickner (Barolo & Lumumba); Nicole Livengood (Stoddard & Fuller); Brian McCammack (Dylan & Soulja Boy); Melissa Peck (Louboutin & Prada); Casey Pratt (Hawthorne & Poe); Karen Salt (Black Russians & Haiti); Stephany Spaulding (Hip Hop & Twain); and Erik Wade (Black Masculinity & The National Horse Thief Detective Association).

I want to thank all my family members—Armstrongs, Davises, Hochstetlers, Schneiders, and Thomases—for their support, but most especially my parents, Paul and Jan Schneider: there is no adequate measure or expression for their love and confidence. Finally, I offer my thanks to those closest to home: Mally and Emmy, possibly the stealthiest twin daughters on the planet, for periodically invading my office and absconding with as many books as they can carry (diversions come in many forms, but none quite so entertaining as chasing after small, giggling book thieves); and Dorrie Armstrong, goddess of all things Arthurian, for understanding what it means to live and work together in the way we do.