Acknowledgements

This book would not have been possible without all those who helped at the original conference where the articles were first presented as papers. I would like to extend particular thanks to Paola Filippucci of the University of Cambridge who was the main co-organiser with me of this conference, to the Istituto Italiano di Cultura in London for hosting the event and to those members of the Association for the Study of Modern Italy (ASMI) Executive Committee who provided a great deal of support, advice and assistance both on the day and beforehand. Thanks are also due to ASMI for a small financial subsidy to help pay for the translation of Domenico Rizzo's chapter and the cost of indexing. I am also grateful to Claudia Nocentini for her assistance and support, and to Lynn Abrams, Paola Filippucci, Mary Gibson and Lynette McCafferty who all read and made useful comments on a draft of my introductory chapter. Finally, I should like to take the opportunity to thank the publishers' anonymous reader for some helpful suggestions and Luciana O'Flaherty and Daniel Bunyard at Palgrave Macmillan for their prompt advice on many occasions. The cover picture appears by permission of the Panizzi Library (Reggio Emilia).

Notes on the Contributors

Barbara Armani completed her PhD in 2003 at the European University Institute at Fiesole (Florence, Italy) on the topic, 'Il confine invisibile. Famiglia, identità e ricchezza di élite ebraica nell'Italia dell'emancipazione. Gli ebrei di Firenze, 1840–1915.' Her publications on Jewish emancipation history include: 'Banchieri e imprenditori ebrei nella Firenze dell'Ottocento: due storie di famiglia fra identità e integrazione', Archivi e Imprese, 16 (1997) and 'L'identità sfidata: gli ebrei fuori dal ghetto', Storica, 15 (1999).

Giulia Barrera works as an archivist in the Direzione generale per gli archivi di stato in Rome. In 2002, she earned a PhD in African history at Northwestern University (Evanston, Illinois, USA), with a thesis on 'Colonial Affairs: Italian Men, Eritrean Women, and the Construction of Racial Hierarchies in Colonial Eritrea (1882–1941)'. In addition to some archival works, she has published on issues of gender and race in colonial Eritrea. She is currently vice-president of the Società Italiana delle Storiche.

Michael R. Ebner is a PhD candidate in the Department of History at Columbia University in New York City. He is currently writing his dissertation entitled 'Confino di polizia: Repression, Deviance, and Everyday Life in Fascist Italy, 1926–43'.

Mary Gibson is Professor of History at John Jay College and the Graduate Center, City University of New York. She is author of Prostitution and the State in Italy, 1860–1915, 2nd edn (Columbus: Ohio State University Press, 1999) and Born to Crime: Cesare Lombroso and the Origins of Biological Criminology (Westport, CT: Praeger Press, 2001). Her present projects include translation of Lombroso's classic works (with Nicole Rafter) and a history of women's prisons in Liberal Italy.

Alessandra Gissi is a temporary lecturer in nineteenth- and twentieth-century women's history at the University of Naples L'Orientale and has published 'Un percorso a ritroso: le donne al confino politico 1926–1943', Italia contemporanea, 226 (2002). She completed her PhD in 2002 at the University of Naples L'Orientale on midwives in the Fascist period. She is a member of the Executive Committee of the Società Italiana delle Storiche.

Ann Hallamore Caesar is Professor of Italian at the University of Warwick. She has published widely on nineteenth- and twentieth-century literature and culture. Author of Characters and Authors in Luigi Pirandello (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1998), she is currently working with a co-author on a Cultural History of Italian Literature since 1690 for Polity Press.

Domenico Rizzo is Editorial Secretary of the historical journal Quaderni Storici and temporary lecturer at the University of Naples L'Orientale. He completed his PhD in 2002 at the L'Orientale. The topic of his dissertation was 'Gli spazi della morale: pubblico e privato nella costruzione liberale della famiglia (1871–1905)'. His main research interests lie in social practices and legal institutions.

Mark Seymour teaches Italian and European History at the University of Otago, New Zealand. He completed his PhD at the University of Connecticut, USA, in 2001, with a thesis entitled "“Divorce Italian-Style”: Marriage, Church and State in the Making of Modern Italy, 1860–1903”.

Anna-Maria Tapaninen has taught social anthropology and is currently employed as a planning officer in the Department of Sociology, University of Helsinki. Her PhD was based on anthropological fieldwork in Pozzuoli (Naples) and focused on women's everyday life. It was published (in Finnish) in 1996. Her ongoing research deals with social transactions and symbolic transformations within child abandonment in Naples in the 1870s.

Bruno P.F. Wanrooij teaches Italian history and cultural studies on the Florence programmes of Georgetown University and Syracuse University. His publications include Storia del pudore. La questione sessuale in Italia 1860–1940 (Venice: Marsilio, 1990). He has edited Otherness. Anglo-American Women in 19th and 20th Century Florence (Florence: Cadmo, 2001). His current research interests focus on the history of marriage mediation.

Perry Willson is Senior Lecturer in Italian History at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. Her publications include The Clockwork Factory: Women and Work in Fascist Italy (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1993) and Peasant Women and Politics in Fascist Italy. The Massaie Rurali (London: Routledge, 2002). She is a member of the Editorial Board of Modern Italy journal and an elected member of the Steering Committee of the Scottish Women's History Network.
