

Cambridge Imperial and Post-Colonial Studies Series

General Editors: Megan Vaughan, Kings' College, Cambridge and Richard Drayton, King's College, London

This informative series covers the broad span of modern imperial history while also exploring the recent developments in former colonial states where residues of empire can still be found. The books provide in-depth examinations of empires as competing and complementary power structures encouraging the reader to reconsider their understanding of international and world history during recent centuries.

Andreas Eckert is Professor of African History at the Humboldt University Berlin and director of the International Research Centre “Work and Human Life Cycle in Global History” of the Humboldt University. His main research interests lie in African history (nineteenth and twentieth century), the history of colonialism, globalization, and historiography. His most recent books include Herrschen und Verwalten. Afrikanische Bürokraten, staatliche Ordnung und Politik in Tansania, 1920–1970 (Munich: Oldenbourg, 2007) and Kolonialismus (Frankfurt am Main: Fischer Taschenbuch Verlag, 2006). He has edited a number of volumes, the most recent being Vom Imperialismus zum Empire – Nicht-westliche Perspektiven auf die Globalisierung (Frankfurt am Main: Edition Suhrkamp, 2009).

Marc Frey is Helmut Schmidt Chair of International History at Jacobs University Bremen. Before going to Bremen in 2006 he taught at the Universities of Bonn, Münster, and Cologne. His main interests lie in the history of late colonialism and decolonization and in the history of development cooperation. His more recent publications include The Transformation of Southeast Asia: International Perspectives on Decolonization (with Ronald W. Pruessen and Tan Tai Yong, Armonk, NY, and London: M. E. Sharpe, 2003, and Singapore: Singapore University Press, 2004), Dekolonisierung in Südostasien. Die Vereinigten Staaten und die Auflösung der europäischen Kolonialreiche (Munich: Oldenbourg, 2006), and “Decolonization and Dutch-American Relations” in Hans Krabbendam, Cornelis A. Van Minnen, Giles Scott-Smith (eds.), Four Centuries of Dutch-American Relations 1609–2009 (Amsterdam: Boom; Albany: State University of New York Press, 2009): 609–20.

Andreas Hilger is Post-Doctoral Fellow at the Helmut Schmidt University of the German Armed Forces in Hamburg. His interests lie in the history of international relations, German–Soviet relations, and East–South relations during the twentieth century. He is currently completing a book on Soviet relations with India and Pakistan during the Cold War era. His publications include Deutsche Kriegsgefangene in der Sowjetunion, 1941–1956. Kriegsgefangenenpolitik, Lageralltag und Erinnerung (Essen: Klartext, 2000) and, as editor, Die Sowjetunion und die Dritte Welt. UdSSR, Staatssozialismus und Antikolonialismus im Kalten Krieg, 1945–1991 (Munich: Oldenbourg, 2009).

Paul H. Kratoska is Managing Director of NUS Press at the National University of Singapore. He is a former editor of the Journal of Southeast Asian Studies, a regional editor of the International Journal of Asian Studies, and a member of Council of the Malaysian Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society. His research interests include academic publishing, the history of food and nutrition in Asia, the Japanese Occupation of Southeast Asia, and the presentation of Asian history in school textbooks. His more recent publications include The Japanese Occupation of Malaya: A Social and Economic History (London: C. Hurst, 1998. Japanese translation, Tokyo: Kojinsha Publishers, 2005); “The Southeast Asian Rice Trade and Its Ramifications, 1850–1950” in Food and Globalization, eds. Alexander Nuetzenadel and Frank Trentmann (Oxford: Berg, 2008); and, as editor, Asian Labor in the Wartime Japanese Empire (Armonk, NY: M.E. Sharpe, 2005) and The Thailand-Burma Railway, 1942–1946: Documents and Selected Writings (London and New York: Routledge, 2005, six volumes).

J. Thomas Lindblad studied political science and economics at Columbia University and the University of Amsterdam and received his PhD from the University of Amsterdam in 1982. Since 1975, he has been affiliated with Leiden University, since 1987 as Associate Professor in Economic History and since 1999 as Associate Professor of Indonesian History. He has been a visiting fellow at the Hankuk University of Foreign Study in Seoul, the University of Nagoya, and the Australian National University in Canberra. Major publications include Between Dayak and Dutch; The Economic History of Southeast Kaliamantan, 1880–1942 (Dordrecht/Providence: Foris, 1988), Foreign Investment in Southeast Asia in the Twentieth Century (London: Macmillan, 1998), The Emergence of a National Economy; An Economic History of Indonesia, 1800–2000 (with Howard Dick, Vincent Houben and Thee Kian Wie; Crows Nest, NSW: Allen & Unwin, 2002), and Bridges to New Business; The Economic Decolonization of Indonesia (Leiden: KITLV Press, 2008).

Mairi S. MacDonald completed her PhD in history at the University of Toronto in 2009. Her thesis, “The Challenge of Guinean Independence, 1958–1971,” considered the impact of Sékou Touré’s interpretation of Guinean sovereignty upon evolving international norms concerning African states. She worked as a lawyer and consultant for a number of years before returning to academic life, and remains interested in international development, law, and regulation.

Christoph Marx is Professor of Non-European History at the University of Duisburg Essen. He is an editor of the journal Periplus: Jahrbuch für Außereuropäische Geschichte and member of the editorial board of the journal Politikon. His main research interests are the history of apartheid in South Africa, the colonial history of Africa, and comparative approaches to the history of the frontier and to the history of Christian missionaries. Major publications include *Oxwagon Sentinel.
