Children in Culture, Revisited
Also by Karín Lesnik-Oberstein

CHILDREN IN CULTURE: Approaches to Childhood (editor)

‘CHILDREN IN LITERATURE’, Volume 32 of the Yearbook of English Studies (editor)

CHILDREN’S LITERATURE: Criticism and the Fictional Child

CHILDREN’S LITERATURE: New Approaches (editor)

THE LAST TABOO: Women and Body Hair (editor)

ON HAVING AN OWN CHILD: Reproductive Technologies and the Cultural Construction of Childhood
Children in Culture, Revisited

Further Approaches to Childhood

Edited by

Karín Lesnik-Oberstein
Contents

List of Illustrations vii
Acknowledgements viii
Notes on Contributors ix

Introduction: Voice, Agency and the Child
Karín Lesnik-Oberstein 1

1 Gender and Childhood in Neoliberal Times: Contemporary Tropes of the Boychild in Psychological Culture
Erica Burman 18

2 Playthings: Archaeology and the Material Ambiguities of Childhood
Eleanor Conlin Casella 35

3 Homophobic Bullying: A Queer Tale of Childhood Politics
Daniel Monk 55

4 Reading the ‘Happy Child’: Normative Discourse in Wellbeing Education
Hannah Anglin-Jaffe 73

5 Perspectives and Community: Constructions of Autism and Childhood
Helen Ainslie 90

6 Bothering about Words: Children’s Literature and Ideas of Simplicity and Instruction
Sarah Spooner 107

7 Irony and the Child
Sue Walsh 126

8 Fort/Da: A Reading of Pictures of Innocence by Anne Higonnet
Neil Cocks 147
Contents

9 Television for Children: Problems of National Specificity and Globalization 167
   Jonathan Bignell

10 Out with Romany: Simulating the Natural in BBC Radio's Children's Hour 1932–1943 186
   Simon Flynn

11 Vital Victims: Senses of Children in the Urban 208
   Jenny Baidipe

Selected Bibliography 223

Index 227
Illustrations

2.1 Clear glass baby bottle, Alderley Sandhills Project, 2003  41
2.2 Bisque porcelain doll’s head, Alderley Sandhills Project, 2003  42
2.3 Children of the Hagg at play, 1920s. Photograph courtesy of E. Younger  43
2.4 Plan of Nursery Wards, Ross Female Factory, Tasmania, Australia. Ross Factory Archaeology Project, 2007  47
2.5 Ferrous serving spoon, detail in situ. January 2007  48
11.1 Girl with balloon by Banksy  215
Acknowledgements

This volume owes a great deal to the invaluable support of Paula Kennedy at Palgrave Macmillan and the kind and efficient help of Ben Doyle, also at the publishers. The contributors to this book have been fantastic. I cannot thank them enough for their hard work, generosity and deep engagement. Special thanks are due to Simon Flynn and Sarah Spooner for their crucial help in the final stages. My colleagues, friends and students at the Graduate Centre for International Research in Childhood: Literature, Culture, Media (CIRCL) both within and outside the University of Reading are always at the heart of my work on childhood. Above all, no one could wish for better friends or more inspiring and supportive colleagues than Sue Walsh and Neil Cocks. Love, always, to all my wonderful friends and family, and love and thanks every day to my partner, Hoyte. This book is dedicated with great love to my nephews and niece: Zev, Ayal, Elah and Avi.

KAŘÍN LESNIK-OBERSTEIN
Contributors

Helen Ainslie heads her own dance school in Reading. She completed her PhD in 2009 at the University of Reading on constructions of autism, titled ‘Why Autism? Perspectives, Communication, Community’. Helen has a continuing interest in constructions of ‘the autistic’ as an identity, particularly in relation to ‘the child’, and is currently working on issues relating to autobiography and autism.

Hannah Anglin-Jaffe is Lecturer in Special Educational Needs at the University of Exeter. Previously, she lectured at the University of Plymouth after completing her doctorate on constructions of D/deafness, orality and sign. Hannah's main areas of research and teaching are disability studies and inclusive education. She also has an interest in cultural approaches to difference and diversity in the study of childhood. She has published on the relationship between deaf culture and inclusive education and is currently completing a book exploring attitudes to sign language and D/deafness.

Jenny Bavidge is Senior Lecturer in English at the University of Greenwich. She has written on the representation of children in urban spaces, urban ecocriticism and the role of London in children's literature. She is the author of Theorists of the City: Lefebvre, De Certeau and Benjamin (2011) and co-edited (with Robert Bond) City Visions: The Work of Iain Sinclair (2007).

Jonathan Bignell is Professor of Television and Film at the University of Reading and a member of the board of the Graduate Centre for International Research in Childhood: Literature, Culture, Media (CIRCL). His books include Beckett on Screen (2009), Postmodern Media Culture (2000) and his co-edited collections includes A European Television History (2008), Popular Television Drama: Critical Perspectives (2005) and British Television Drama: Past, Present and Future (2000). His work on children's television and toys includes articles on Doctor Who, Action Man and the Teletubbies.

Erica Burman is Professor of Psychology and Women's Studies at Manchester Metropolitan University. Her work addresses intersections between gender, culture and models of subjectivity, including attending to the role of representations of childhood and memory within these. Her most recent books include Deconstructing Developmental Psychology (2nd edition, 2008) and Developments: Child, Image, Nation (2008), and she is co-editor of Gender and Migration (2010) and of the special issue of Feminist Theory on ‘Feminisms and Childhood’ (2010). She is also a group analyst.

Neil Cocks is Lecturer in English, American and Children’s Literature at the University of Reading. His publications on childhood include his monograph Student Centred: Education, Freedom and the Idea of Audience (2009) and articles and chapters on childhood, reading, sexuality and death.

Eleanor Conlin Casella is Senior Lecturer in Archaeology at the University of Manchester. She has directed fieldwork projects in the UK, Australia and North America. Her recent books include The Alderley Sandhills Project: An Archaeology of Community Life in (Post-)Industrial England (2010) and The Archaeology of Institutional Confinement (2007). She is a co-editor of The Archaeology of Plural and Changing Identities (2005) and Industrial Archaeology: Future Directions (2005). Her current work focuses on the materiality of gender, sexuality and childhood, household archaeology, incarceration and places of confinement, and British colonialism.

Simon Flynn is training as a child and adolescent psychotherapist at the Tavistock Clinic and working clinically in the NHS. Before this, he completed a doctorate on contemporary fiction and children’s literature at Cardiff University and was a lecturer in English and children’s literature at several universities. Simon has published a series of articles on the BBC Children’s Hour broadcasts, in particular looking at the programme’s construction of evacuees and evacuation during the Second World War and the celebrated adaptations of John Masefield’s novel The Box of Delights. He is interested in the way Kleinian and post-Kleinian psychotherapeutic writings use literary texts and also in the relationships between psychoanalysis and science fiction.

Karín Lesnik-Oberstein is Reader in Critical Theory at the University of Reading and the director of the Graduate Centre for International Research in Childhood: Literature, Culture, Media (CIRCL). Her research engages with transdisciplinary critical theory, particularly as it relates to issues of identity. Karín’s publications on childhood include the monographs Children’s Literature: Criticism and the Fictional Child (1994) and *On Having an Own Child: Reproductive Technologies and the Cultural Construction of Childhood (2008); the edited volumes Children in Culture: Approaches to Childhood (1998), ‘Children in Literature’ (a special issue of the Yearbook of English Studies, 2002) and Children’s Literature: New Approaches (2004); and numerous chapters and articles.

Sarah Spooner works in legal publishing. In 2006 she completed her PhD, titled ‘Knowing Its Place? Language and Landscape in Arthur Ransome’, and she has published on ideas of the ‘exotic’ and ‘foreign’ in children’s literature. Sarah continues to be interested in theoretical issues concerning landscape, heritage, mapping and childhood.

Sue Walsh is Lecturer in English, American and Children’s Literature at the University of Reading. Her publications in the field include her monograph Kipling’s Children’s Literature: Language, Identity and Constructions of Childhood (2010) and chapters and articles on constructions of the animal and the child, irony and childhood, the Gothic and the child, and childhood, children’s literature and (auto)biography. Sue is pursuing research into childhood and irony.