Masculine Style
Global Masculinities
Edited by Michael Kimmel and Judith Kegan Gardiner

Michael Kimmel is Professor of Sociology at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. He is the author or editor of more than 20 books, including: Men’s Lives, Guyland: The Perilous World Where Boys Become Men, The Gendered Society, The Politics of Manhood, and Manhood in America: A Cultural History. He edits Men and Masculinities, an interdisciplinary scholarly journal, and has edited the Encyclopedia of Men and Masculinities and the Handbook of Studies on Men and Masculinities. He consults with corporations, NGOs, and public sector organizations all over the world on gender equity issues, including work-family balance, reducing workplace discrimination, and promoting diversity.

Judith Kegan Gardiner is Professor of English and of Gender and Women’s Studies at the University of Illinois at Chicago. Her books are Craftsmanship in Context: The Development of Ben Jonson’s Poetry and Rhys, Stead, Lessing, and the Politics of Empathy. She is the editor of the volumes Provoking Agents: Gender and Agency in Theory and Practice, Masculinity Studies and Feminist Theory, and a coeditor of The International Encyclopedia of Men and Masculinities. She is also a member of the editorial board for the interdisciplinary journal Feminist Studies.

Published by Palgrave Macmillan:

Masculine Style: The American West and Literary Modernism
By Daniel Worden

Men and Masculinities Around the World: Transforming Men’s Practices
Edited by Elisabetta Ruspini, Jeff Hearn, Bob Pease, and Keith Pringle

Constructions of Masculinity in British Literature from the Middle Ages to the Present (forthcoming)
Edited by Stefan Horlacher
MASCULINE STYLE

The American West and Literary Modernism

Daniel Worden

palgrave
macmillan
Contents

List of Illustrations vii
Note from the Series Editors ix
Acknowledgments xi

Introduction: Masculinity, Modernism, and the West 1
1 Masculinity for the Million: Gender in Dime-Novel Westerns 17
2 Between Anarchy and Hierarchy: Nat Love’s and Theodore Roosevelt’s Manly Feelings 35
3 Marrying Men: Intimacy in Owen Wister’s The Virginian 57
4 “I Like to Be Like a Man”: Female Masculinity in Willa Cather’s O Pioneers! and My Ántonia 81
5 A Discipline of Sentiments: Masculinity in Ernest Hemingway’s Death in the Afternoon 107
6 Specters of Masculinity: Collectivity in John Steinbeck’s The Grapes of Wrath 127

Conclusion: “There Never Was a Man Like Shane” 143

Notes 151
Bibliography 179
Index 191
Illustrations

1.1 Beadle’s Half-Dime Library 8, November 9, 1877. Robert D. Farber University Archives and Special Collections Department, Brandeis University 22

1.2 Deadwood Dick Library 1, March 15, 1899. Robert D. Farber University Archives and Special Collections Department, Brandeis University 30

3.1 Owen Wister on horseback, by F. J. Haynes & Brothers, St. Paul, Minnesota, undated. Owen Wister Collection, American Heritage Center, University of Wyoming 63

3.2 “That’s All,” Owen Wister carrying camera, undated. Owen Wister Collection, American Heritage Center, University of Wyoming 64

3.3 “Shoshone Ladies Lunching,” 1891. Owen Wister Collection, American Heritage Center, University of Wyoming 66

3.4 “Buffalo Forks, Wyoming Territory,” undated. Owen Wister Collection, American Heritage Center, University of Wyoming 67

5.1 Juan Gris, El Torero, 1913. The painting appeared as the frontispiece to the first edition of Ernest Hemingway’s Death in the Afternoon, 1932 116
In Sweden, a “real man” is one who does childcare for his own children, and liberals and conservatives argue not about whether there should be government-mandated paternity leave but about the allocation of time between new mothers and fathers. In China, years of enforcing a one-child rule have led to a population with a vast demographic imbalance in the number of males over females, with consequences yet to be determined. In Iran, vasectomy becomes increasingly popular as men seek to take more responsibility for family planning in an atmosphere of restrictive gender roles. In the Philippines, government-supported exports of women as nurses, maids, and nannies to first-world countries alters the lives of boys and girls growing up both at home and in the developed countries, and Mexican-American men adapt to their wives’ working by doing increased housework and childcare, while their ideology of men’s roles changes more slowly. And throughout the world, warfare continues to be a predominantly male occupation, devastating vast populations, depriving some boys of a childhood, and promoting other men to positions of authority.

Global Masculinities is a series devoted to exploring the most recent, most innovative, and widest ranging scholarship about men and masculinities from a broad variety of perspectives and methodological approaches. The dramatic success of Gender Studies has rested on three developments: (1) making women’s lives visible, which has also come to mean making all genders more visible; (2) insisting on intersectionality and so complicating the category of gender; (3) analyzing the tensions among global and local iterations of gender. Through textual analyses and humanities-based studies of cultural representations, as well as cultural studies of attitudes and behaviors, we have come to see the centrality of gender in the structure of modern life and life in the past, varying across cultures and within them. Through interviews, surveys, and demographic analysis, among other forms of social scientific inquiry, we are now able to quantify some of the effects of these changing gender structures. Clearly written for both the expert and more general audience, this series embraces the advances in scholarship and applies them to men’s lives: gendering men’s lives, exploring the rich diversity of men’s lives—globally and locally, textually and practically—as well as the differences among men by social class, “race”/ethnicity and nationality, sexuality, ability status, sexual preference and practices, and age.

MICHAEL KIMMEL AND
JUDITH KEGAN GARDINER
I have had the pleasure of circulating in a number of academic communities while working on this book. Caren Irr and Michael T. Gilmore worked with me during the early stages of this project, and their guidance has been invaluable to me. I also learned a great deal from John Burt, Patricia Chu, Eugene Goodheart, Thomas King, Susan Lanser, Paul Morrison, and Mark Sanders at Brandeis, and my work on this book has been enriched by conversations with and comments by Christine Bold, William Handley, Melissa Homestead, Victoria Lamont, Marilee Lindemann, Sean McCann, Alan Nadel, Forrest Robinson, Ann Romines, Merrill Maguire Skaggs, Joseph Urgo, Michael Warner, and Nicolas Witschi. I would also like to thank Ross Barrett, David Bottorff, Max Brzezinski, Danielle Coriale, Melanie Doherty, Geneva Gano, Jason Gladstone, David Greven, Shannon Hunt, Holly Jackson, Doug Kirshen, Mikel Parent, Jordan Stein, Erica Still, and Dan Stout for reading and helping me to think about this project.

My colleagues in the Department of English at the University of Colorado at Colorado Springs have been supportive of my work in every possible way, as were my colleagues in the Department of English at Wake Forest University. I owe a special note of thanks to the Georgia O’Keeffe Museum Research Center, where I worked on this project as a scholar-in-residence. Barbara Buhler Lynes, Heather Hole, and Eumie Imm-Stroukoff made me feel at home and gave me the space and time needed to read, write, and edit. Ondine Chavoya, Pat Hills, Lois Rudnick, and Sue Taylor provided welcome intellectual company during my stay in Santa Fe. I was able to conduct archival research with the help of an Ernest Hemingway Research Grant from the John F. Kennedy Library, a travel grant from the American Heritage Center at the University of Wyoming, a Robert Preyer grant from the Brandeis Department of English and American Literature, and two Provost’s Dissertation Awards from Brandeis University. The generosity of these institutions has contributed greatly to my archive and my work. I owe many thanks to the librarians at Brandeis University, the John F. Kennedy Library, the American Heritage Center at the University of Wyoming, the Center for Southwest Research at the University of New Mexico, and the University of Colorado at Colorado Springs. Thanks to Brigitte Shull, Jo Roberts, and Richard Bellis at Palgrave for enthusiastically ushering this book into print.

My family has been supportive of this work in innumerable ways. Thanks to my Mom and Dad—or, Brenda and Dan Worden—and Cory and Jessalynn Worden. The Worden and Jones families have always supported me, and this means more than I can put into words here. While working on this project, I also joined another family; many thanks to Diane and Peter Vennema, who make Santa Fe feel like home, Peter Zuromskis, who keeps Massachusetts feeling like home, John, Tamara, and the Biscuit.

Last, my deepest thanks to Catherine Zuromskis, for so many things.