Preface

I have incurred many institutional and personal debts in writing this book. I am grateful to the fellows of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, to the trustees of the Jan Smuts Memorial Fund, and to Nottingham University Research Committee, for invaluable assistance with research expenses. Rhoda Kadalie, Nomusti Ntamo and Zizi Ntamo were immensely kind hosts. South African academics too numerous to mention have been uncommonly generous with their time and professional advice. Julia Jellema-Butler in London offered incisive comments on the final draft, and Cliff Butler was once again an exemplary proof-reader. Anne Jellema has been supportive throughout.

I am grateful to colleagues in the Department of Politics at Nottingham, in particular Paul Heywood and April Pidgeon, for ensuring that a relaxed atmosphere and a lively research culture have remained compatible with the demands of teaching and administration. April Pidgeon also provided invaluable assistance in the preparation of the manuscript.

Apartheid was organized around the classification of a population by race. I use the term 'African' to refer to those officially classified as 'Black'; and I use 'Black' to refer to all those not classified as White under apartheid legislation. I capitalize all such terms throughout in order to emphasize their problematic nature.

Parts of Chapter 7 first appeared in Volume 32 of Government and Opposition, Winter, 1997.
