The Literature of the Great War Reconsidered
This page intentionally left blank
The Literature of the Great War Reconsidered
Beyond Modern Memory

Edited by
Patrick J. Quinn
and
Steven Trout
For our wives
This page intentionally left blank
Contents

Acknowledgements ix
List of Contributors xi
Introduction 1

Part I Textuality and War

1 Beyond Fiction? The Example of Winged Warfare (1918)
Chris Hopkins 9

2 Literary Images of Vicarious Warfare: British Newspapers
and the Origin of the First World War, 1899–1914
Glenn R. Wilkinson 24

Part II Beyond the Trenches

3 Encoded Enclosures: the Wartime Novels of Stella Benson
Debra Rae Cohen 37

4 The Self in Conflict: May Sinclair and the Great War
Terry Phillips 55

5 ‘Lives Mocked at by Chance’: Contradictory Impulses in Women’s Poetry of the Great War
Deborah Tyler-Bennett 67

6 ‘The Huge Gun with Its One Blind Eye’: Scale and the War
Poetry and Writings of Harriet Monroe
Allesandria Polizzi 77

Part III Nationality and Response

7 French Women Poets Respond to the Great War
Nancy Sloan Goldberg 93

8 Myrmidons to Insubordinates: Australian,
New Zealand and Canadian Women’s
Fictional Responses to the Great War
Donna Coates 113
Contents

9 ‘Dear, Tender-Hearted, Uncomprehending America’: Dorothy Canfield Fisher’s and Edith Wharton’s Fictional Responses to the First World War
   Mary R. Ryder 143

Part IV Modernists at War

10 Fatal Symbiosis: Modernism and the First World War
   Milton A. Cohen 159

11 Artistry and Primitivism in The Enormous Room
   William Blazek 172

Part V Revising the War Poets

12 Mother’s Boy and Stationmaster’s Son: the Problem of Class in the Letters and Poems of Wilfred Owen
   John Gibson 189

13 The War Poetry of Wilfred Owen: a Dissenting Reappraisal
   Malcolm Pittock 205

14 ‘Thoughts That You’ve Gagged All Day’: Siegfried Sassoon, W. H. R. Rivers and ‘[The] Repression of War Experience’
   Patrick Campbell 219

15 Siegfried Sassoon: the Legacy of the Great War
   Patrick J. Quinn 230

Index 239
A very special thanks to R. Nathan Wilson, without whose computer expertise and keen editorial eye this project would never have been completed; even the 1999 flu epidemic at Fort Hays State University could not keep Nathan from heroically poring over chapters and providing invaluable assistance. The editors also wish to thank Dr James Forsythe, Dean of Graduate Studies and Research and Vice Provost at Fort Hays State University, for helping to defray the costs involved in preparing the manuscript.
This page intentionally left blank
List of Contributors

William Blazek is a Senior Lecturer at Liverpool Hope University College, where he teaches courses on American Modernism, literature and culture, technology and photography, and serves as MA Award Director for the American Studies Department. He previously taught at the University of New Orleans, Clarion University of Pennsylvania and the University of Glasgow. His current publication research includes a co-edited volume of essays on American mythology and contemporary literature for Liverpool University Press as well as a monograph on American writers in the First World War.

Patrick Campbell runs the MA in Performing Arts at Middlesex University. He has a Doctorate from the University of London and has been Visiting Professor at the Universities of British Columbia and Northern Colorado. His books include Wordsworth and Coleridge: Lyrical Ballads (Macmillan – now Palgrave, 1991), Analyzing Performance (Manchester University Press, 1996) and Trent Park: A History (Middlesex University Press, 1997). Both Psychoanalysis and Performance (Routledge), an edited collection of commissioned essays (with Adrian Kear), and a thematic issue of Contemporary Theatre Review on the performing body appeared in 1999. He was formerly editor of MTD (Music/Theatre/Dance). Patrick has written numerous literary articles in academic journals, many devoted to the work of Siegfried Sassoon. His full-length critical study of the poet (which includes a discussion of every poem written by Sassoon during the Great War) was published in the USA by McFarland in 1999.

Donna Coates teaches in the English Department at the University of Calgary. She has published a number of articles on Canadian and Australian women’s fictional responses to the Great War. She is now conducting research on Canadian and Australian women’s fictional and dramatic responses to the Second World War as well as examining the literature of Canadian and Australian women who are re-visioning these historical periods.

Debra Rae Cohen is an Assistant Professor at the University of Arkansas. Previously she taught at the University of Mississippi, where she is writing a dissertation on enclosure, space and citizenship in British women’s fiction of the Great War. She completed her undergraduate work at Yale and returned to academia after over a decade spent as a cultural journalist in New York City. She has taught at the University of Helsinki and has guest-lectured on women’s war literature at the Universities of Jyvaskyla, Joensuu and Tampere (Finland) and the University of Vienna.

Milton A. Cohen is Associate Professor of Literary Studies and Humanities at the University of Texas at Dallas. He has written on various aspects of Modernism and American literature, including Imagism, Futurism, Schoenberg, Stein, Hemingway, Fitzgerald and cummings. Recently, he has finished a book-manuscript entitled ‘Movement, Manifesto, Melee: The Modernist Group 1910–1914’. Presently, he is writing a study of Hemingway’s style in the first In Our Time.

John Gibson holds degrees from the University of London and the University of Hull in England and an MA in literature from the University of Massachusetts. He is currently teaching at the University of Southern Indiana where he has just developed and taught a synthesis course on the First World War. He lives in Evansville, Indiana, and Belchamp Walter, England. He has two books of poetry published in England, Starting From Here (1995) and Folk Dancing (1996), and a book of poems on Mexico accompanying the colour prints of artist Michael Aakhus (Evansville, IN, 1997).

Nancy Sloan Goldberg is Professor of French and Women’s Studies at Middle Tennessee State University. She earned her undergraduate degree at the University of Wisconsin-Madison and her MA and PhD at Vanderbilt University. She is the author of En l’honneur de la juste parole, a study of French pacifist poetry of the First World War, and has published articles on French political and social literature in Journal of European Studies, The French Review and The Minnesota Review. Her forthcoming work, Women, Your Hour is Sounding: Challenge and Choice in French Women’s Novels of the Great War 1915–1919 (St. Martin’s Press – now Palgrave), is the first comprehensive study of the literary response of established writers to the conflict.

Chris Hopkins is a Senior Lecturer at Sheffield Hallam University, where he is Course Leader for the BA (Hons) in English Studies. His research is mainly on the British novel in the 1930s, on Anglo-Welsh writing, and on representations of modernity in the twentieth century.
He has published on these topics in journals including Critical Survey, Literature and History, Focus on Robert Graves and His Contemporaries, Notes and Queries, The Journal of Gender Studies, The Review of Irish Studies, English Language Notes and Style. He has contributed chapters to books on the 1930s and on the writings of the Great War, and is currently working on a book for Palgrave: Thinking About Texts – An Introduction to English Studies.

Terry Phillips is Senior Lecturer in English at Liverpool Hope University College where she teaches courses on women’s writing and nineteenth- and twentieth-century literature. Her main research interests are in the nineteenth- and twentieth-century novel, Modernism, and the literature of the Great War. She has published articles on May Sinclair in Image and Power (1996), edited by Sarah Sceats and Gail Cunningham, and Women of Faith in Victorian Culture (1998), edited by Anne Hogan and Andrew Bradstock.

Malcolm Pittock has taught at the University of Aberdeen and Bolton Institute. Although retired, he is actively engaged in research which is issue-based. Publications are forthcoming on Dickens, Orwell, Marvell and Owen’s relation to Tailhade and Tolstoy. He is at present working on Mrs Gaskell’s debt to Scott in North and South, after recently completing an article on the relation between Redgauntlet and Bleak House. Other publications include a volume on the German Expressionist dramatist, Ernst Toller, in the Twayne German Authors series and articles on, inter alia, Chaucer, Henryson, Marlowe, Ibsen, Lawrence, T. S. Eliot, David Storey and the Victorian poet, Sidney Dobell.

Allesandria Polizzi is a doctoral student at the University of North Texas, where she is currently writing a dissertation on work as a performance of cultural identity in American working-class literature. Her publications include an essay on H.D. in the Journal of Imagism and a chapter on Margaret Fuller in a collection of essays due in 2000. Her teaching interests include American literature, film, popular culture and disability issues. Based on this latter interest, she is currently serving a three-year appointment on the MLA Disability Issues in the Profession committee.

Patrick J. Quinn is Professor of English Literature at University College Northampton and sits on the Management Committee of the St John’s College Robert Graves Trust at Oxford. He is general editor of the 24 volume Carcenet Press Robert Graves Programme and has written

Mary R. Ryder is Professor and Director of Graduate Studies in English at South Dakota State University. She holds a PhD in American Literature from the University of Illinois, with a speciality in Realism and Naturalism. Her book Willa Cather and Classical Myth earned the Classical and Modern Literature Incentive Award and the Mildred Bennett Award for distinguished Cather scholarship. Her work has appeared in journals such as Style, Western American Literature and American Literary Realism and ranges from studies of Cather’s connection to writers like Frank Norris and Sinclair Lewis to a study of feminism and style. Her current research involves the recovery of Midwest farm fiction written by women between 1900 and 1930 and its portrayal of violence against women.

Deborah Tyler-Bennett is a poet and lives in Loughborough. She performs her work and has poems published in Sheffield Thursday, Angel Exhaust, Connections, Borderlines, Iota, Other Poetry, The Yellow Crane, Poetry Nottingham International, Poetry Monthly and elsewhere. She has also been published in many anthologies, including Her Mind’s Eye and Contemporary English Poetry. Her book, Edith Sitwell: The Forgotten Modernist, was published in 1996. She recently won a diploma in the Scottish International Open Poetry Competition for her poem ‘Gentle Song’. She has performed her work at venues in England and Scotland. Forthcoming poems will appear in The Interpreter’s House, Never Bury Poetry, Various Artists and elsewhere.

Glenn R. Wilkinson received his PhD from the University of Lancaster in 1994 and currently teaches History at Mount Royal College in Calgary, Alberta, Canada. He is working on a book concerning Edwardian cultural attitudes toward war and the origins of the First World War to be published by Palgrave.