ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book has been a long time in the making, and it would not have been completed without the aid and encouragement of many. At Notre Dame, I am thankful for the guidance of Professors Joseph Buttigieg, Barbara Green, and Gerald Bruns, among others. Each of them provided significant comments for early versions of the manuscript. The Notre Dame Zahn Research Travel Fund generously provided financial support for research in London. I thank the archivists who provided me with materials at the Library of Congress, the Notre Dame Special Collections, the British Library, the Tate Gallery Archive, the Theatre Museum Archive, and the National Theatre Archive, where I was able to view the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre Trust papers. At Baylor, I am very grateful to my colleagues David Jeffrey and Susan Colón, who provided both encouragement and wise assessment of later versions of the book. I also thank both Baylor's Department of English and the Honors Program for various types of support, financial, material, and otherwise. Two chapters have been previously published. A version of chapter 8 was published as "Shakespeare and (Anti-German) Nationalism in the Writing of English Literary History, 1880–1923," in English Literature in Transition, 1880–1920 (September 2003, 46:4), and a version of chapter 9 was published as "The Modern Artist as Historian, Courtier, and Saint: Typology and Art History from Vasari to Pound" in Clio: A Journal of Literature, History, and the Philosophy of History (Spring 2006, 35:2). I thank the editors of these journals as well as my editor at Palgrave and an anonymous reviewer for many insightful comments. The cover art for this book, "Lucca: Tower of the Guinigi Palace," is an 1845 watercolor by John Ruskin and is used courtesy of The Victorian Web.

Most of all, I have been blessed by my friends and family through their love and support over the years. Mike and Jo Anne Beaty graciously provided me with workspace in their home for several months. My parents have been role models in so many ways, intellectual and otherwise, and have provided unwavering love and support. My two daughters, Miriam and Monica, fill my life with joy and energy. They got along so well with babysitters Heather, Kendra, and others when “Mommy had to go work on her book.” My husband, Victor, was supportive of this project from its beginning to end. From the many Friday afternoons he gave me so that I could write in peace and away from small children, to the proofreading, pep talks, and prayers, he too is here in this book. I am so grateful to him and am blessed to live life with him. Thank you to all.
