

Cold War in the Desert

Cold War History Series

General Editor: Saki Dockrill, Senior Lecturer in War Studies, King's College, London

The new Cold War History Series aims to make available to scholars and students the results of advanced research on the origins and the development of the Cold War and its impact on nations, alliances and regions at various levels of statecraft, and in areas such as diplomacy, security, economy, military and society. Volumes in the series range from detailed and original specialised studies, proceedings of conferences, to broader and more comprehensive accounts. Each work deals with individual themes and periods of the Cold War and each author or editor approaches the Cold War with a variety of narrative, analysis, explanation, interpretation and reassessments of recent scholarship. These studies are designed to encourage investigation and debate on important themes and events in the Cold War, as seen from both East and West, in an effort to deepen our understanding of this phenomenon and place it in its context in world history.

Acknowledgements

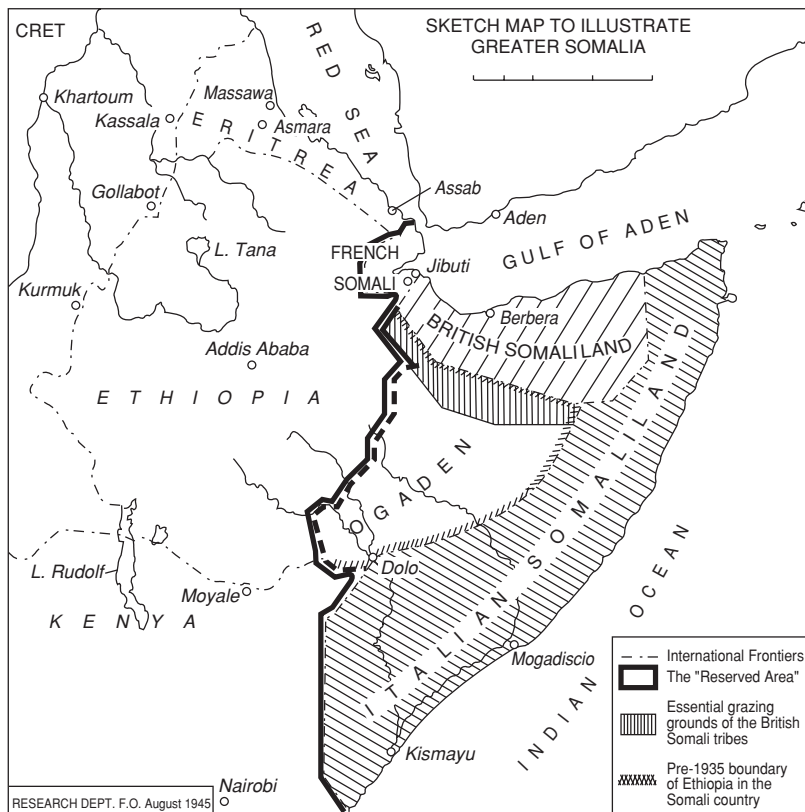

Although this book is the result of my own work, it could not have been completed without the help of a number of people and institutions. I would like to acknowledge the assistance of the staffs of the Public Record Office, Kew; the British Library, London; the London Library; the libraries of the University of Cambridge, the University of London, the London School of Economics and Political Science, the School of Oriental and African Studies; the National Archives, Washington, DC; the Library of Congress and the Truman Library, Independence, Missouri. The maps in this book are from the Public Record Office.

I would like to thank Dr John Kent and Professor D. Cameron Watt of the London School of Economics for their advice during the research and writing of the PhD thesis on which this book is based. Dr Michael Dockrill and Dr Saki Dockrill of the War Studies Department, King's College, London, encouraged me to turn the thesis into a book and Eleanor Birne at Macmillan and Ruth Willats, have provided the editorial support. My thanks also to Anthony Gorst, Dr Lewis Johnman and the University of Westminster, London, for granting me a Research Fellowship, and providing me with convivial company, both of which have helped me to complete this work. Sally Marks, in her usual cheerful way, facilitated my research in the Diplomatic Records Branch of the National Archives and Mark Thompson in Cambridge provided much needed back-up for my wayward wordprocessors. I owe a special debt of gratitude to my parents and my wife, Judith, for their support.
