Religion and Family Links
Religion and Family Links

Neofunctionalist Reflections

Donald Swenson, Ph.D.

Department of Sociology and Anthropology
Mount Royal College
Calgary, Alberta, Canada
Preface

Texts are like rabbits: they proliferate in abundance. Choices in books, then, tend to overwhelm the interested reader. If a book is to be successful, it needs to offer something that is unique and different from competing works. This summary text is an attempt to do that.

If one is to peruse textbooks, a common feature is that the authors document the current and the most valuable studies on any one topic or discipline. Few if any attempt to use a theoretical framework to synthesize the wide range of literature. I propose a difference — to utilize a theoretical framework to combine diverse conceptions and studies into a coherent whole. The one selected is a sociological one termed Neofunctionalism. I make use of a published work (Swenson, 2004) to pull together salient literature on religion and the family.

I initiate this work with an outline of a Neofunctionalist theoretical framework of the family that is linked to a multidimensional interpretation of religion. The focus of the framework is on systems: the chrono, organic, personality, social and cultural systems. Both religion and the family can be separately categorized into these systems.

Thereafter, under the caption of the chronosystem, I link this system to the life course perspective in family studies to trace the history of the family from the Roman era to Early Christianity, Early Medieval, Central Medieval, and Late Medieval societies and the genesis of the early modern period through to the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries in England.

The rubric of the organic system captures the historical and empirical relationship between religion and sexuality that implies the reproductive capacities of men and women. The focus on the individual embedded in the family system is the personality system. Topics such as conversion, gender, intimate violence, sexual orientation, family stress and spirituality are synthesized in this chapter.

There are two major dimensions of the social system: ritual and sacred social organizations. Covered in this title is ritual in context and its impact on child outcomes in family contexts, adolescent substance abuse, child outcomes in a longitudinal study and ritual, divorce and remarriage, marital fidelity, social networks and religion, family structure and ritual participation, and religious homogamy and marital quality.
The final chapter is devoted to the cultural system which subsumes both mythology (sacred belief systems) and ethos (sacred moral systems). Another theory is introduced here, attachment theory, which is embedded in Neofunctionalism. The focus in presenting attachment theory is to document the empirical research of childhood attachment security and concepts of the divine. Additional topics reviewed include parental and self origins of young adults’ God concepts, images of the divine in marriage and beliefs and ritual in resolving marital conflict. In view of the fact that Islam is becoming more and more a salient religion, several articles were reviewed that link Islam and the family. Additional topics covered in the final chapter include conversion and women’s public employment, moral cosmology, and the success story of how parents socialize their children into accepting and continuing their parents’ faith.

To make the text more user friendly, I have included many tables and figures to illustrate the dense text. In addition, a glossary is provided that provides meaning to the bold words that appear throughout the work.

Donald Swenson

Mount Royal College
Calgary, Alberta, Canada
Acknowledgements

I would like to honour my wife, Angela Swenson, who has not only supported me in this project but gave up time in being with me for me to complete this work. Also, recognition is given to our common children their spouses and children: Niall (Linda), Stephanie (Tim), Catherine, Rachel, David, Jared and Joel. I also thank Drs. Ken Hoeppner, former Associate Vice-President of Research and Manuel Mertin, Dean of the Faculty of Arts, of Mount Royal College who gave financial assistance in the form a grant for a research assistant and course release to enable me to complete this document. The person to be thanked most of all is my research assistant, Mr. Kenneth Yu, BA, who read and gathered a significant amount of literature that forms the basis of the work.
Contents

1 Familial Links to the Sacred Neo-Functionalism and Religion ............................................. 1
   Overview .................................................................................................................... 1
   A Multi-Dimensional Interpretation of Religion ......................................................... 1
   A Neo-Functionalist Theoretical Framework ................................................................. 4
      Multi Dimensionality ............................................................................................. 4
      Multi-Level ............................................................................................................ 5
   A Systems Perspective ............................................................................................... 6
   The Inter-Penetration of the System of the Systems .................................................... 7
   Multi-disciplinary ...................................................................................................... 7
   Integrative of Extant Family Theories ......................................................................... 7
   Theoretical Links Between Religion and the Family ................................................... 9
   A Summary Theory and a Theoretical Model ............................................................... 10
   References ................................................................................................................. 13

2 The Chronosystem: A Social History of Religion and the Family Orientation ......................... 15
   The Neo-Functionalist Theoretical Framework and Historical-Longitudinal Reflections .................................................................................. 15
   The Roman Family ..................................................................................................... 20
      A Concise History of the Roman Empire ................................................................. 20
      General Characteristics of the Family ..................................................................... 21
      Marriage ................................................................................................................. 22
      Children ............................................................................................................... 24
      Some Conclusions .................................................................................................. 25
   Early Christianity and the Family ............................................................................... 25
      The Role of Women ............................................................................................... 26
      The Early Medieval Family .................................................................................... 28
      Some Conclusions .................................................................................................. 30
   The Central-Medieval Family ...................................................................................... 30
      The Physical-Social Systems: Medieval Europe: 1050–1250 .................................. 31
      The Cultural-Sacred System: The Church .............................................................. 32
      The Personality-Social System: The Central Medieval Family ............................... 36
      An Anomaly to the Central Medieval Family: The Chivalric Ideal ....................... 38
Contents

The Late Medieval Family and the Great Plague ........................................ 39
The Organic System: The Description of the Black Plague ......................... 40
Various Systems as Factors of the Black Plague ...................................... 40
Various Systems as Effects of the Black Plague ...................................... 42
Families of the Elite in England: 1550–1800 .............................................. 43
The Restricted Patriarchal Nuclear Family .............................................. 43
The Closed Domesticated Nuclear Family .............................................. 45
Conclusions ......................................................................................... 46
References .......................................................................................... 47

3 The Organic System: Biology, Religion and the Family Orientation .......... 49
The Basic Rationale of the Link Between Religion and Sexuality .............. 49
A History of Religion and Sexuality in the Christian West ....................... 51
Ancient Judaism and Early Christian ..................................................... 51
Patristic-Medieval Christianity .............................................................. 56
Early Modern and Modern Christianity ................................................ 57
Sex and Religion in the United States. Part I: Social History ................... 59
Sex and Religion in the United States and Canada. Part II: Empirical Studies ......................................................................................... 61
Religion and Sex: The Empirical Link, Part I: General Connections .......... 62
Religion and Sex: The Empirical Link, Part II: Canadian Evangelical Ministers ......................................................................................... 63
Religion and Sex: The Empirical Link, Part III: NHSLS .......................... 67
Sexual Satisfaction .................................................................................. 68
Conclusions of Empirical Links of Part II and III .................................... 71
Religion and Sex: The Empirical Link, Part IV: Muslim Women's Health and Reproduction ................................................................. 72
Religion and Sex: The Empirical Link, Part V: Religion and Changes in Family Size ................................................................. 72
Religion and Sex: The Empirical Link, Part VI: Religion and Premarital Sex in Adulthood ................................................................. 73
Religion and Sex: Some Conclusions ...................................................... 74
References .......................................................................................... 74

Orientation ............................................................................................. 77
Conversion ............................................................................................. 77
Attachment Theory and Conversion ....................................................... 78
Conversion and Changes in Family Structure ......................................... 79
Gender ................................................................................................... 80
The Construction of Islamic Patriarchy ................................................... 80
South Asian Women in the United States ................................................. 87
Muslim Women in Arab States .............................................................. 87
Gender Differences in Religiosity ........................................................... 88
Contents

5 The Social System: Ritual and Social Organization

Overview ........................................................................ 107
Ritual ........................................................................ 107
A Sacred Organization .................................................. 108
Ritual in Context ........................................................... 108
  Multi-Level Theory in a Neo-Functionalist Framework ........ 108
Descriptive Data ............................................................. 113
The Analytical Data ........................................................ 114
A Discussion ................................................................ 116
Ritual and Sacred Organization: Two Studies of Adolescent Substance Abuse ........................................ 116
Ritual and Sacred Educational Organization: Three Studies of Academic Achievement ...................................... 117
Ritual and Religious Organization in Time: The Chronosystem Revisited .................................................... 119
Religious Organization and Divorce-Remarriage .............. 125
Social Relationships, Ritual, Divorce and Religious Involvement Among Young Adults .................................. 126
Religious Organization, Ritual and Marital Fidelity ............ 127
Roles in Religious Organization and Families .................... 128
Social Networks ............................................................. 130
Cohort Effects, Ritual and Family Structure ....................... 130
Religious Homogamy and Marital Quality ....................... 131
Conclusions .................................................................. 132
References .................................................................... 132
6 The Cultural System: Mythology and Ethos ........................................135
  Overview ..........................................................................................135
  Definitions of Myth and Ethos ..........................................................135
  Attachment Theory and the Mythology of Christianity: Concepts of the Divine ..........................................................................................136
  Attachment Theory Terms ..................................................................136
  The Sacred Attachment Figure .......................................................138
  The Sacred-Attachment-Behaviour-System ........................................142
    Seeking Proximity to God ..............................................................142
    God as a Haven of Safety ..............................................................142
    God as a Secure Base ....................................................................143
  Responses to Separation and Loss ..................................................143
  Interpersonal Attachment Variations and Attachment to the Sacred
    Attachment Figure ........................................................................143
  Summary Notes on Attachment Theory and Religion .........................144
  Attachment Theory Embedded in a Neo-Functionalist Theory ...............145
  Conclusions .....................................................................................147
  Parental and Self Origins of Young Adults’ God Concepts ....................147
  Adopting New Religious Belief Systems: A Case of Taiwanese Immigrants ............................................................149
  Images of God and Marriage ..........................................................150
  Beliefs and Ritual in Resolving Marital Conflict ...................................151
  Nascent Islamic Law, Marriage and Divorce .......................................152
  Marriage .........................................................................................153
  Divorce ............................................................................................155
  Assimilation and Arabs in America ...................................................156
  Bangladeshi Muslims in Canada .......................................................156
  Religious Conservatism and Women’s Public Employment ....................157
  Moral Cosmology and Adult Values for Children ..................................158
  The Effects of Consistent Parental Beliefs and Behaviours
    Upon Religious Transmission .......................................................159
  Conclusions .....................................................................................161
  References .......................................................................................161

7 Conclusions ......................................................................................165
  References .......................................................................................167

Glossary ...............................................................................................169

Index ....................................................................................................177