The Migration, Diasporas and Citizenship series covers three important aspects of the migration process. Firstly, the determinants, dynamics and characteristics of international migration. Secondly, the continuing attachment of many contemporary migrants to their places of origin, signified by the word 'diaspora', and thirdly the attempt, by contrast, to belong and gain acceptance in places of settlement, signified by the word 'citizenship'. The series publishes work that shows engagement with and a lively appreciation of the wider social and political issues that are influenced by international migration.

Acknowledgements

This book is based on seven years of qualitative research and many people helped along the way. We especially wish to acknowledge Luisa Leonini, who participated in several parts of the research and whose thoughts and comments were invaluable. Roberta Bosisio, Paola Bonizzoni, Lorenzo Domaneschi and Chiara Marchetti also played an important and active part in the project; we wish to thank them for their work, for sharing ideas and offering helpful advice. Maurizio Ambrosini, Luca Queirolo Palmas, Chantal Saint-Blancat and Antonella Spanò also gave us suggestions and empirical insights.

The research received financial support from the Italian Ministry of Education, Universities and Research (Ministero dell'Istruzione, dell'Università e della Ricerca, MIUR) for the projects PRIN 2001-04, 'Socialization and inclusion/exclusion processes in a multicultural context: The case of Milan'. PRIN 2005-07, 'Second-generation youths in Italy: values, group-identifications, consumptions, projects. A confrontation on the inclusion/exclusion paths of the "new second generation" among different theoretical perspectives'. PRIN 2005-07, 'Family Network and Second Generation: Between Consumption and Solidarity'.

As the manuscript evolved through several drafts, a number of readers helped us to improve it. In particular, our sincere thanks go to Melissa Butcher, Michael Eve, Anita Harris, Bruno Riccio and Giovanni Semi, who read and commented on the manuscript and gave us important insights and suggestions.

Parts of the research findings were presented at different meetings and congresses both in Italy and abroad, and many colleagues, generously, gave us important feedback and noteworthy observations. They are too numerous to mention individually, but their suggestions and comments inspired us to refine our arguments.

A special thanks to Danièle Joly who actively supported the book proposal; without her help this book could never have seen the light of day. We are grateful to the Series Editors and the Editorial Board who trusted in our project. Mary Alba gave us essential support and transformed our faulty English into a readable language with keen precision. Finally, our editorial team at Palgrave Macmillan provided all the support we could ask for. We especially thank Philippa Grand and Andrew James.
