Acknowledgements

This book is the culmination of almost ten years' work, and there are many individuals who have informed my thinking during this time. Whilst I cannot thank every one of them, their work is cited within the book. Those individuals who I would like to individually thank include Hannah Bradby and Pia Christensen, who contributed enormously to the development of Constituting Family, and in particular Pia Christensen for our ongoing conversations about childhood and for her advice on earlier chapters. I am grateful to my colleagues and academic friends – Ann Bowker, Emily Dawson, Jenny Driscoll, Melissa Glackin, Heather King, Pat Mahoney, John Owens and Maud Perrier – who have read and offered constructive criticism on individual chapters, and to Sharon Gewirtz and David Morgan, who have both read and offered feedback on the entire manuscript. Most importantly, I would like to thank my lovely family and friends for their encouragement and support throughout this process.

I am grateful to the ESRC and to King's College London who funded the two projects on which I draw here. Finally, I am indebted to the children who participated in both of these projects, for their willingness to share aspects of their lives, which have enriched this book and taught me so much about their experiences of childhood, family and personal life.
