The idea for this collection grew out of an essay I was asked to write for Topos: Journal of Philosophical and Cultural Studies, which is published at the European Humanities University in Minsk, Republic of Belarus. I am indebted to Almira Ousmanova, Associate Professor in the Department of Culturology, for extending that invitation to me. Without her encouragement and intellectual camaraderie this book may very well have never been.

Otherwise, I have my writers to thank for their dedication, patience, and unremitting responsiveness. Special thanks go to Bill Hart for his contribution at the eleventh hour. I am grateful as well for the discerning comments of readers and listeners, particularly Amy Kaplan, Robert Wojtowicz, Sangita Gopal, Heidi Schilpphackle, Imke Meyer, and Bish Sen. Farideh Koohi-Kamali, Melissa Nosal, Lynn Vande Stouwe, and the staff at Palgrave Macmillan ministered diligently to the production of this collection in countless major and minor ways. Thanks also go to Marita Sturken, John Rockwell, “the family of Steve Mendelson,” and Kevin O’Sullivan at Associated Press. Amanda Bloodgood and Gretchen Edwards provided critical logistical assistance. And I should also acknowledge Old Dominion University for granting me a much-needed sabbatical during the initial stage of cementing the project.
