Palgrave Studies in Nineteenth-Century Writing and Culture is a new monograph series that aims to represent the most innovative research on literary works that were produced in the English-speaking world from the time of the Napoleonic Wars to the fin-de-siècle. Attentive to the historical continuities between 'Romantic' and 'Victorian', the series will feature studies that help scholarship to reassess the meaning of these terms during a century marked by diverse cultural, literary, and political movements. The main aim of the series is to look at the increasing influence of types of historicism on our understanding of literary forms and genres. It reflects the shift from critical theory to cultural history that has affected not only the period 1800–1900 but also every field within the discipline of English literature. All titles in the series seek to offer fresh critical perspectives and challenging readings of both canonical and non-canonical writings of this era.

Acknowledgements

The idea for this volume, and some of the essays in it, evolved out of the conference 'Bodies and Things: Victorian Literature and the Matter of Culture' which I co-organized at the University of Oxford in September 2008. I would like to thank my co-organizer, Rosemary Tate, who was also involved in the early stages of assembling this collection, and everybody who participated in the conference.

Joe Bristow has been an exceptionally helpful, perceptive, and scrupulous editor. I am very grateful to Paula Kennedy and Ben Doyle for their advice and assistance in putting together the collection, and to Jo North for her copy-editing expertise.

Thanks are also due to Alina Nagel and Anna Hench for their help in preparing the manuscript for publication.

The editor and publisher gratefully acknowledge the permission granted to reproduce the copyright material in this book. Every effort has been made to trace copyright holders and to obtain their permission for the use of copyright material. Many thanks to Malcolm Shifrin for granting permission to use his image of George Du Maurier's 'At the Turkish Bath' and to Jean-Pierre Bougnet and François Degouys from the Musée de Louvain-la-Neuve for granting permission to use their image of Gustave de Vichy's Lune fin-de-siècle. Any omissions or corrections in terms of copyright will gladly be incorporated in future reprints of this volume.

She contributed papers to Material Cultures, 1740–1920: The Meanings and Pleasures of Collecting (2009), Rethinking the Interior c.1867–1896: Aestheticism and the Arts and Crafts (2010), and Fashion, Interior Design and the Contours of Modern Identity (2010).

Isobel Armstrong is a fellow of the British Academy and Emeritus Professor of English (Geoffrey Tillotson Chair) at Birkbeck College, University of London. She has published widely on nineteenth-century literature and culture and feminist thought. She has lectured and taught in many contexts, including Harvard and Johns Hopkins University. Among her works are a critical history of Victorian poetry (1993) and a co-edited anthology of nineteenth-century women's poetry (1996). Her most recent book, Victorian Glassworlds: Glass Culture and the Imagination 1830–1880, won the Modern Language Association's James Russell Lowell Prize for the best book of 2008. Poems by her appeared in Shearsman's anthology of poetry by women, edited by Carrie Etter, Infinite Difference: Other Poetries by U.K. Women Poets (2010).

Katharina Boehm is Assistant Professor in English Literature at the University of Regensburg, Germany, and a visiting research fellow at the English Department of Rutgers University. She is co-editor of the essay collection Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Ageing in Nineteenth-Century Culture (forthcoming). Her work has been published in Victorian Review, Studies in the Novel, and Journal of Victorian Culture. She is a founding editor of the online journal Victorian Network. She is currently completing a monograph on Dickens, popular science, and childhood.

Bill Brown is Karla Scherer Distinguished Service Professor in American Culture at the University of Chicago. He has published widely on thing theory, American literature, and popular literary genres. He is the author of A Sense of Things: The Object Matter of American Literature (2003), of a special issue of Critical Inquiry, entitled 'Things' (2001), of The Material

Unconscious: American Amusement, Stephen Crane, and the Economies of Play (1996), and of numerous articles which have appeared in PMLA, New Literary History, Representations, and other journals.

Stefania Forlini is Assistant Professor in the Department of English at the University of Calgary, Canada. Her primary area of research is late-Victorian literature and culture, with particular interest in science, material culture, and early science fiction. Her most recent publications include 'Technology and Morality: The Stuff of Steampunk', published in Neo-Victorian Studies, and 'Modern Narratives and Decadent Things in Arthur Machen's The Three Impostors', forthcoming in English Literature in Transition, 1880–1910.

Kate Hill is Senior Lecturer in History at the University of Lincoln, UK. She works on the history of museums in the nineteenth century, and her publications include Culture and Class in English Public Museums, 1850–1914 (2005), Museums and Biographies (edited, 2012), and Women and Museums in England 1850–1914 (forthcoming). She is currently interested in the development of social history in museums around 1900.

Kirstyn Leuner is a doctoral candidate in the Department of English at the University of Colorado, Boulder. Her research interests include the Romantic novel, the gothic, the picturesque, and media studies. She is an editor of The Poetess Archive, The Letters of Robert Bloomfield (Romantic Circles), and the Women Poets of the Romantic Period digital archive (CU Libraries). Her dissertation demonstrates the influence of Romantic-era travel writing on nineteenth-century narrative inventions.

Samantha Matthews is Senior Lecturer at the University of Bristol, UK. Research interests include Romantic and Victorian poems, poets, and their 'afterlives', book history and the material text, biography and literary tourism. She is the author of Poetical Remains: Poets' Graves, Bodies, and Books in the Nineteenth Century (2004), and is working on albums, album poetry, and relations between manuscript and print in the long nineteenth century.

Victoria Mills worked at the Victoria and Albert Museum and as a tutor in Museum Studies before embarking on doctoral study at Birkbeck College, University of London. Her thesis focused on Victorian fiction and the cultures of collecting. Recent publications include 'The Museum as "Dream Space": Psychology and Aesthetic Response in George Eliot's Middlemarch', published in 19: Interdisciplinary Studies in the Long

Nineteenth Century (2011). Vicky is currently co-curating an exhibition on Victorian sentimentality at Tate Britain.

Muireann O’Cinneide is Lecturer in English at the National University of Ireland, Galway (NUIG). Her monograph Aristocratic Women and the Literary Nation, 1832–1867 (2008) was published in the Palgrave Studies in Nineteenth-Century Writing and Culture series. She is currently working on nineteenth-century travel writing and conflict narratives, and on election narratives in the mid-Victorian novel.

Catherine Spooner is Senior Lecturer in English at Lancaster University, UK. Her research explores the relationships between Gothic and material culture, with a particular emphasis on fashion. Her publications include Fashioning Gothic Bodies (2004), Contemporary Gothic (2006), and, co-edited with Emma McEvoy, The Routledge Companion to Gothic (2007). Her latest book is Post-Millennial Gothic: Comedy, Romance and the Rise of Happy Gothic, due to be published in 2013.
