

New Documentaries in Latin America

GLOBAL CINEMA

Edited by Katarzyna Marciniak, Anikó Imre, and Áine O'Healy

The Global Cinema series publishes innovative scholarship on the transnational themes, industries, economies, and aesthetic elements that increasingly connect cinemas around the world. It promotes theoretically transformative and politically challenging projects that rethink film studies from cross-cultural, comparative perspectives, bringing into focus forms of cinematic production that resist nationalist or hegemonic frameworks. Rather than aiming at comprehensive geographical coverage, it foregrounds transnational interconnections in the production, distribution, exhibition, study, and teaching of film. Dedicated to global aspects of cinema, this pioneering series combines original perspectives and new methodological paths with accessibility and coverage. Both “global” and “cinema” remain open to a range of approaches and interpretations, new and traditional. Books published in the series sustain a specific concern with the medium of cinema but do not defensively protect the boundaries of film studies, recognizing that film exists in a converging media environment. The series emphasizes a historically expanded rather than an exclusively presentist notion of globalization; it is mindful of repositioning “the global” away from a US-centric/Eurocentric grid, and remains critical of celebratory notions of “globalizing film studies.”

Katarzyna Marciniak is a professor of Transnational Studies in the English Department at Ohio University.

Anikó Imre is an associate professor of Critical Studies in the School of Cinematic Arts at the University of Southern California.

Áine O'Healy is a professor of Modern Languages and Literatures at Loyola Marymount University.

Acknowledgments

A book on contemporary Latin American documentaries calls for a variety of approaches on a wide range of topics. In many ways, this could only be a collective project, a gathering of different voices and perspectives. We are most grateful to our contributors for helping us start mapping the extraordinarily rich landscape of recent nonfiction filmmaking in Latin America.

We thank our friends, colleagues, and fellow documentary scholars for their guidance and support, in particular Idelber Avelar, Angela Dalle Vacche, Héctor Fernández L'Hoeste, Jane Gaines, Vicki Galloway, José Quiroga, Michael Renov, Raquel Rivera, Isis Sadek, Jay Telotte, and Anastasia Valecce. Thanks as well to those who showed interest in our work and encouraged us to pursue this project: Hector Amaya, Patricia Aufderheide, Alfredo Dias D'Almeida, Claudia Ferman, Alessandro Fornazzari, Manuel Pérez-Tejada, Laura Podalsky, Dylon Robbins, Robert Stam, Ann Marie Stock, Juana Suárez, Jason Weidemann, and Ismail Xavier. Marcelo Krasilcic helped us with the images, and we are grateful for his patience, generosity, and technical expertise. Thanks as well to David Robinson at Tulane University for handling the pictures in Chapter 1.

Juan Carlos Rodríguez is grateful to the Office of the Dean of the Ivan Allen College of Liberal Arts, at Georgia Tech, for supporting his field research trip to Argentina, Chile, and Brazil in 2009, with funds provided by the Georgia Tech Foundation's Small Grants for Research Program.

We thank Ocho Libros Editores for allowing us to translate and reprint sections from Germán Liñero's book, Apuntes para una historia del video en Chile, and for permission to use images from that same book. Our gratitude also goes to Fairleigh Dickinson University Press/The Rowman and Littlefield Publishing Group for letting us use excerpts from Antonio Traverso's essay "Nostalgia, Memory, and Politics in Chilean Documentaries of Return," published in Patricia Swier and Julia Riordan-Goncalves's Dictatorships in the Hispanic World: Transatlantic and Transnational Perspectives. We thank María Caridad Cumaná and Manchester University Press for permission to use portions from Susan Lord and María Caridad Cumaná's "Deterritorialized Intimacies: The Documentary Legacy of Sara Gómez in Three Contemporary Cuban Women Filmmakers,” originally published in Hispanic and Lusophone Women Filmmakers: Theories, Practice and Difference, edited by Parvati Nair and Julián Daniel Gutiérrez-Albilla. And we thank Alex Rivera for allowing us to reproduce images from his Cybracero website and from his video Why Cybraceros?

At Palgrave Macmillan, we would like to thank Robyn Curtis, Erica Buchman, Rachel Taenzler, and Desiree Browne for their careful handling of our project. We are also grateful to our reviewers for their suggestions and their constructive criticism.

Special thanks go to Cynthia Román-Hernández for her loving support and patience in the course of this process.
