

SPANISH MILAN

SPANISH MILAN
A CITY WITHIN THE EMPIRE,
1535–1706

Stefano D'Amico

palgrave
macmillan

SPANISH MILAN

Copyright © Stefano D'Amico, 2012.

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 2012

All rights reserved.

First published in 2012 by

PALGRAVE MACMILLAN®

in the United States—a division of St. Martin's Press LLC, 175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010.

Where this book is distributed in the UK, Europe and the rest of the world, this is by Palgrave Macmillan, a division of Macmillan Publishers Limited, registered in England, company number 785998, of Houndmills, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 6XS.

Palgrave Macmillan is the global academic imprint of the above companies and has companies and representatives throughout the world.

Palgrave® and Macmillan® are registered trademarks in the United States, the United Kingdom, Europe and other countries.

ISBN 978-1-349-43439-8 ISBN 978-1-137-30937-2 (eBook)

DOI 10.1057/9781137309372

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

D'Amico, Stefano, 1963—

Spanish Milan : a city within the empire, 1535–1706 /
Stefano D'Amico.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-1-137-00382-9 (alk. paper)

1. Milan (Italy)—History—1535–1859. 2. Naples (Kingdom)—
History—Spanish rule, 1442–1707. 3. Spaniards—Italy—Milan—History.
I. Title.

DG658.1.D37 2012

945'.21107—dc23

2012006116

A catalogue record of the book is available from the British Library.

Design by Newgen Imaging Systems (P) Ltd., Chennai, India.

First edition: October 2012

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Printed in the United States of America.

For Aliza and Luca

In loving memory of my mother Anna D'Amico Allegri (1933-2007)

CONTENTS

List of Figures	ix
List of Tables	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
Introduction: A Forgotten City	1
1 “Millain the Great”: Population and the Urban Fabric	7
2 Social Stratification and Professional Groups: Toward a Growing Polarization	35
3 The Pulsing Heart of Europe: Urban Manufactures and Trading Networks	61
4 The Second Rome: Religious Reform and Ecclesiastical Institutions	93
5 The Stronghold of the Monarchy: Administration and Political Dynamics	123
Conclusion	151
Notes	155
Bibliography	209
Index	243

FIGURES

1.1	Map of Milan by Antonio Lafréry, 1573	10
1.2	Map of Milan by Marco Antonio Barateri, 1629	15
1.3	Palazzo Marino and St. Fedele	18
1.4	Urban parishes within the walls, 1610	19
4.1	The true portrait, life, death, facts, and miracles of Saint Carlo Borromeo	99
5.1	Map of the Duchy of Milan by Giovanni Giorgio Settala, 1592	124
5.2	Philip II and the coats of arms of his reigns	127

TABLES

2.1	Socio-occupational groups in Milan in 1576 and 1610	36
2.2	Parish of St. Tecla, years 1574, 1582, and 1610 (socio-professional categories)	60
3.1	Number and distribution of domestic staff in Milan in 1576 and 1610	68
3.2	Parish of St. Tecla: number and distribution of domestic staff	68

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book is the product of many years of work and would not have been possible without the help, advice, or simple friendship and support coming from many people. First of all, I want to thank Domenico Sella, whose work inspired me to pursue the study of Spanish Milan while I was still a student at the University of Milan. I later had the pleasure and honor of meeting Domenico, a uniquely kind, generous, and intelligent soul—and his mentoring and scholarly assistance were fundamental during my first years in the American academic system.

For the advice and support in the initial stages of research for this book, I am eternally grateful to Elena Brambilla, Carlo Capra, Lucia Sebastiani, Giovanni Muto, Giovanni Vigo, Franco Ramella, and the late Claudio Donati and Cesare Mozzarelli. I also want to extend a personal thank you to Alex Grab, whom I met in the Milanese archives and who, with great humor and humility, initiated me to the mysteries of American universities.

As a work of synthesis, this book strongly relies on the contributions of a new generation of brilliant scholars, many of whom began their career with me at the University of Milan and whom I am honored to call friends. Among these researchers, I would like to thank Gianvittorio Signorotto, Cinzia Cremonini, Vittorio Beonio-Brocchieri, Antonia Abbiati, Massimo Giannini, Chiara Continisio, Mario Rizzo, Giovanni Liva, Stefano Levati, Luca Mocarelli, Flavio Rurale, Paola Curatolo, Lucia Aiello, Marco Ostoni, and Renzo Corritore. Within this group, special thanks go to Antonio Álvarez-Ossorio Alvariño and his wife Montse for their wonderful hospitality during my research trips to Madrid. And to my old friend and colleague Giuseppe De Luca, my warmest sentiment and thanks—I cannot even begin to quantify his help and advice in all practical and theoretical matters of work and life.

I am grateful to the staff of the Archivio di Stato, Archivio Storico Civico, Archivio della Curia Arcivescovile, and Biblioteca Ambrosiana in Milan for their invaluable assistance during my research. I also thank the Civica Raccolta Bertarelli in Milan, for the permission to use some of their maps and views of Milan in my book.

A short-term research grant from the Newberry Library in May 2005 allowed me to access their extraordinary collection, and to write part of the first chapter of this book. I want to thank the library's staff, and especially Paul Gehl, for their help during a very pleasant, productive, and unforgettable month in Chicago.

This work would never have been completed without the generous financial support of Texas Tech University that helped fund invaluable research trips to libraries and archives. In particular, I would like to thank the College of Arts & Sciences and Dean Lawrence Schovanec for granting me a Scholars Incentive Award in spring 2011, allowing me to work almost full time on this manuscript. I would also like to thank Allan Kuethe, Bruce Daniels, Jorge Iber, and Randy McBee, who, as chairs of the history department since I began my service at Texas Tech, have offered financial, academic, and personal support in pursuing my research projects. My former and current colleagues, especially Jeffrey Mosher, John Howe, Mark Stoll, Julie Willett, Ron Rainger, David Troyansky, Ed Steinhart, Catherine Miller, and Will Gray, have always made the environment of the history department friendly and stimulating.

My dear colleagues and friends, Paul Deslandes, Patricia Pelley, Miguel, Susie, and Diego Levario, often with the help of good food and hearty wine, have cheered many of my days in Lubbock, Texas.

I finally want to thank my parents-in-law, Wai and Ming Wong, for their constant support, and my father Giuseppe D'Amico, whose encouragement and material assistance during my trips to Milan have been fundamental for the completion of this work.

This book is dedicated to Aliza, my amazingly beautiful and smart wife, who, besides much improving the quality of my manuscript through her editing, has always offered to me her full love and support, and shared with me every moment of joy and sadness in the last twenty years. And to Luca, my ten-year-old son, who, with his hugs, laughter, and curious questions, has often interrupted me during my writing sessions, reminding me of the real meaning of life. This work is just a small token of my unconditional love.

Sections of this book first appeared in "Crisis and Transformation: Economic Organization and Social Structures in Milan, 1570–1610," Social History 25 (2000), 1–21, used here with the permission of Taylor & Francis Ltd, <http://www.tandfonline.com>; and in "Rebirth of a City: Immigration and Trade in Milan, 1630–59," Sixteenth Century Journal 32 (2001), 697–721, used here with the permission of Sixteenth Century Journal Publishers, Inc.