Acknowledgments

This book is inhabited by many absent presences, as citations and footnotes are by no means adequate to trace all of the influences that factored in its completion.

My thoughts on the spectral metaphor were focused and sharpened in the context of a series of thought-provoking ghostly gatherings: the Ghosts, Gender, History panel at the 2006 American Comparative Literature Association conference in Princeton, convened by Sladja Blazan; the 2006 Space, Haunting, Discourse conference in Karlstad, organized by Maria Holmgren Troy and Elisabeth Wennö; the 2007 Postcolonial Ghosts conference in Montpellier, organized by Judith Misrahi-Barak; the 2009 Specters, Haunting and Archive graduate conference at the University of Amsterdam, organized by Anthie Argyriou, Tanja Baudoin, Moosje Goosen, Patricia de Vries and Arnisa Zeqo; the Uncanny Cosmopolitans panel at the 2009 ACLA conference in Cambridge, MA, convened by Roy Kamada and Erica Johnson; the 2012 Ghosts workshop in Bern, organized by Virginia Richter and Marijke Denger-Kähler; and the 2013 Representations of Ghosts in Media and Popular Culture panel at the Society for Cinema and Media Studies conference in Chicago, convened by Murray Leeder and Simone Natale. I am also indebted to all the students who participated in my courses on Re-Reading the Ghost and Death and Mourning as well as the Spectralities tutorial for stimulating discussions and thought-provoking papers.

Mieke Bal kept reminding me that this book needed to be written and provided essential comments on the manuscript, greatly enhancing its coherence and clarity. María del Pilar Blanco, my fellow traveler in all matters spectral, helped me think through many of the central ideas and prevented the final chapter from veering off course. Murat Aydemir, Marie-Aude Baronian, Stephan Besser, Carolyn Birdsall, Joost de Bloois, Laura Copier, Rudolph Glitz, Cornelia Gräbner, Peter Hitchcock, Anette Hoffmann, Silke Horstkotte, David James, Jeroen de Kloet, Christoph Lindner, Mireille Rosello, Eliza Steinbock, Hanneke Stuit and Astrid Van Weyenberg provided valuable advice and support, in different forms, all much appreciated.

At the Faculty of Humanities at the University of Amsterdam, the departments of Literary Studies and Media Studies, the Amsterdam School for Cultural Analysis (ASCA) – in particular its luminous managerial team: Eloe Kingma and Jantine van Gogh – and the Amsterdam Centre for Globalisation Studies (ACGS) continue to provide, against the odds, an unparalleled environment in which research and teaching can be productively integrated. Without this environment and the unfailing efficiency of Felicity Plester and Chris Penfold at Palgrave Macmillan, this book would not have seen the light of day.

Finally, I am deeply grateful to my husband Naj for always being there for me, especially over the last year. The completion of this book coincided with the illness and untimely death of my brother Jeroen, to whom I dedicate it, in sadness and admiration.
