Acknowledgments

This book was conceived as soon as the global financial and economic crisis hit Greece in early 2010 and materialized mostly while I held a generous Marie Curie Fellowship in the cloistered European University Institute in Florence, Italy. I am deeply indebted to the friendship and intellectual stimulation I was offered by Stefano Bartolini, Rainer Bauböck, László Bruszt, Pepper Culpepper, Hanspeter Kriesi, Philippe Schmitter, Sven Steinmo, and Alex Trechsel. Thanks to the obliging personnel in the library and the delightful ladies at the cafeteria; it was not a few times that they really made my day. And thanks to Leonardo Morlino for always being available to offer insightful comments over excellent Tuscan wine. Federica, Stefano, and the late Beatrice have been valuable friends and family substitutes. Long live their Republic of Palmerino!

Many of the ideas in this book were presented at various venues to – often too – argumentative people. Thanks to all who attended and offered comments and valuable criticism in presentations made in the School of Slavonic and East European Studies of the University College London; the University of Sheffield; the University of Leiden; the George Washington University; the Social Science Center in Berlin; the Robert Schuman Center for Advanced Studies in Florence; the School for International Studies at Simon Fraser University in Vancouver; the Center for Modern Greek Studies of California State University in San Francisco; the History Department at San Diego University; the European Studies Program at Bremen

University; and the EUDO 2013 dissemination conference in Florence. I had the fortune to be invited as a visiting fellow at the Quality of Government Institute of the University of Gothenburg in Sweden and was amazed by the richness of that experience.

Portions of certain chapters draw upon ideas originally presented in the articles ‘Populist Democracies: Post-Authoritarian Greece and Post-Communist Hungary’ and ‘Why Greece Failed’ that were published respectively in Government and Opposition and Journal of Democracy. I gratefully acknowledge the excellent feedback and encouraging words of these journals’ editors. In a certain sense, the idea of this book is theirs.

Duncan McDonnell and Sofia Vasilopoulou kindly agreed to read the entire book manuscript, offered ideas, and saved me from many mistakes. All remaining errors are, of course, mine.

The book is dedicated to the memory of Juan Linz, mentor and friend, who, I am sure, would have enjoyed reading it. It is also dedicated to Zina, Antigone and Stefanos – co-conspirators in, and co-authors of, real life.
