Reworking Postcolonialism
This page intentionally left blank
Reworking Postcolonialism
Globalization, Labour and Rights

Edited by

Pavan Kumar Malreddy
Researcher, Goethe University Frankfurt, Germany

Birte Heidemann
Researcher, University of Potsdam, Germany

Ole Birk Laursen
Postdoctoral Research Fellow, University of Copenhagen, Denmark

and

Janet Wilson
Professor of English and Postcolonial Studies, University of Northampton, UK
Reworking postcolonialism: globalization, labour and rights / [edited by] Pavan Kumar Malreddy, Researcher, Goethe University Frankfurt, Germany; Birte Heidemann, Researcher, University of Potsdam, Germany; Ole Birk Laursen, Postdoctoral Research Fellow, University of Copenhagen, Denmark; Janet Wilson, Professor of English and Postcolonial Studies, University of Northampton, UK.

Summary: "An interdisciplinary collection of essays, Reworking Postcolonialism explores questions of work, precarity, migration, minority and indigenous rights in relation to contemporary globalization. It focuses on the impact of the global market forces on the formation of new subject positions among urban dwellers, exiles, and other disenfranchised communities. Bringing together political, economic and literary approaches to texts and events from across the postcolonial world, the essays collected here investigate the transformative effects of the global dissemination of capital, goods and movements of people, and call for a revision of the existing discourses on rights, entitlements and citizenship." — Provided by publisher.

Includes index.

PN56.P555R49 2015
809’.93358—dc23 2015001759
Contents

Acknowledgements vii

Notes on the Contributors viii

Introduction 1

Pavan Kumar Malreddy

Part I Globalization, Modernities and Other Histories

1 Once Were Internationalists? Postcolonialism, Disenchanted Solidarity and the Right to Belong in a World of Globalized Modernity 19

Frank Schulze-Engler

2 The Postcolonial Condition: A Few Notes on the Quality of Historical Time in the Global Present 36

Sandro Mezzadra and Federico Rahola

Part II Global Displacements: Exile, Movement and Migration

3 Urban Poverty and Homelessness in the International Postcolonial World 57

Melissa Kennedy

4 The Exigencies of Exile and Dialectics of Flight: Migrant Fictions, V. S. Naipaul, Kiran Desai 72

Malachi McIntosh

5 The ‘Shattered Racialised Person’ and (Post)multiculturalism in Australia 87

Lyn Dickens

6 Sliced Tongues: The Inconvenient Voice of Tibetan English Writers 102

Enrique Galván-Álvarez

Part III Globalization, Labour and Work

7 Post-Agreement Belfast: Labour, Work and the New Subalterns in Daragh Carville's Play This Other City 119

Birte Heidemann

8 Labour, Pleasure and the Sublime: The ‘Work’ of the Dalitbahujans 134

Pavan Kumar Malreddy

9 Driving Pinky Madam (and Murdering Mr Ashok): Social Justice and Domestic Service in Aravind Adiga’s The White Tiger 150

Alex Tickell
Contents

10 Circuits of Power, Labour and Desire: The Case of Dominique Strauss-Kahn 165
   Maria-Belén Ordóñez

Part IV Globalization, Rights and Citizenship
11 Postcolonial and Settler Colonial Studies Offer Human Rights a Revised Agenda 183
   Diana Brydon
12 Human Rights, Security and Global Political Hinduism 199
   Arun Chaudhuri
13 Reading the Riots: Precarity, Racial Injustice and Rights in the Novels of Alex Wheatle 214
   Ole Birk Laursen
14 Discoursing on Slums: Representing the Cosmopolitan Subaltern 229
   Janet Wilson

Index 244
Acknowledgements

Our warm thanks go to Chantal Zabus, Editor-in-Chief of Postcolonial Text, and to Sharanya Jayawickrama, Associate Editor of Postcolonial Text, for kindly granting permission to reprint Sandro Mezzadra and Federico Rahola’s essay ‘The Postcolonial Condition: A Few Notes on the Quality of Historical Time in the Global Present’, published in Postcolonial Text 2.1 (2005). We also wish to thank the European Association for Commonwealth Literature and Language Studies (EACLALS) and the Commonwealth Foundation for their support in organizing the first postgraduate conference at the Institute of English Studies, University of London in August 2011, which provided the basis for this collection. Finally, we are grateful to the anonymous readers at Palgrave Macmillan for their constructive feedback on this collection.
Notes on the Contributors

Diana Brydon is Canada Research Chair in Globalization and Cultural Studies and Distinguished Professor in the Department of English, Film, and Theatre at the University of Manitoba. She is currently investigating transnational literacies, new postcolonialisms and global higher education. She has published on postcolonial cultural and literary studies and how communities are adjusting to globalizing processes. Co-edited books include Renegotziating Community: Interdisciplinary Perspectives, Global Contexts (2008) and Crosstalk: Canadian and Global Imaginaries in Dialogue (2012). Her current projects include a co-authored book on ‘Globalization and Autonomy’, the ‘Brazil/Canada Knowledge Exchange’ (a partnership development project funded by SSHRC), a co-edited book, Concurrencenes: Archive, Voice, and Place, and a new project, ‘Redefining Canada for a Globalizing World: An “Ecology of Knowledges” approach’.

Arun Chaudhuri is Sessional Assistant Professor in the Department of Anthropology at York University in Toronto, Canada. His research and writing have focused on the globalization and politicization of religion, with a particular focus on Hinduism, South Asia and the South Asian diaspora. His research interests more generally concern the anthropology of religion, public culture, immigration, multiculturalism, race/racism, media and technology.

Lyn Dickens is a PhD candidate in the Department of Sociology and Social Policy at the University of Sydney, Australia. She recently completed her thesis, titled ‘Intervening in the racial imaginary: “Mixed race” and resistance in contemporary Australian literature’. Lyn has published on race and feminism, media representations of people of mixed race, and literary depictions of Australian multiculturalism in journals such as Australian Studies and the Global Media Journal. Her research interests include critical mixed-race studies, racial trauma, feminist theory, creolization and decoloniality. She is a member of the Centre for Peace and Conflict Studies at the University of Sydney. In 2010–11 she was a Visiting Student at the English Faculty and Emmanuel College at the University of Cambridge.

Enrique Galván-Álvarez holds a PhD in Tibetan-English poetry from the University of Alcalá (Madrid) and is currently a lecturer at the online-based International University of La Rioja. He has conducted research at the University of Manchester (BA, MA), the University of Oxford (2011–12), SOAS, University of London (2010) and Goldsmiths College, University of London (2013–14). He has published a monograph on Shashi Tharoor’s The Great Indian Novel and several journal articles and book chapters on the appropriation of the premodern and precolonial in postmodern and postcolonial times in South and Central Asian contexts. His research interests comprise Buddhist anarchism, postcolonial nation-building and the use of religious narratives for and against the state.

Birte Heidemann has recently completed her doctoral dissertation on negative liminality in contemporary Northern Irish literature at the University of Potsdam. From 2008 to 2014, she taught in the Department of English at Chemnitz University of Technology. Her research interests are in postcolonial literature and theory, Northern Irish writing and the post–9/11 novel. She has co-edited two special issues of the Journal of Postcolonial Writing (2011, 2012) and the volume ‘From Popular Goethe to Global Pop’: The Idea of the West between Memory and (Dis)Empowerment (2013).

Melissa Kennedy lectures in English Literature, Culture and Media Studies at the University of Vienna. She has published on Maori, Francophone and indigenous Japanese postcolonial literature and cultural studies. Along with several articles published in Journal of Commonwealth Literature and Journal of New Zealand Literature, she has published a monograph on Maori writer Witi Ihimaera (2011) and is a contributing author to the forthcoming Cambridge History of New Zealand Literature and the MLA Approaches to Teaching series. Her current work applies economics to postcolonial considerations of poverty and inequality, tracing capitalism in colonized spaces through the colonial, neocolonial and neoliberal periods.

Ole Birk Laursen is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the University of Copenhagen, where his Carlsberg Foundation–funded research project concerns anarchism and anti-colonialism in the British Empire. His research clusters around issues of riots, revolutions, governance and nationalism in postcolonial and diasporic contexts. From 2008 to 2010 he was Database Assistant Editor on the AHRC-funded project ‘Making Britain: South Asian Visions of Home and Abroad, 1870–1950’. He has published on a range of black and Asian British fictions and histories and co-edited, with Florian Stadtler, ‘Networking the Globe: New Technologies and the Postcolonial’ (2013), a special issue of the Journal of Postcolonial Writing.

Pavan Kumar Malreddy is a Researcher at Goethe University Frankfurt. He has previously taught at Chemnitz University of Technology, York University, Toronto (2002–03) and University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon (2009–10), and worked with various research organizations (Canadian Council on Learning, Ottawa, Aboriginal Education Research Center, Saskatoon) as a commissioned writer and editor from 2007 to 2009. He has published over 20 essays and chapters on terrorism, postcolonialism and indigenous politics in Canada in journals such as Third World Quarterly, Intertexts, Journal of Postcolonial Writing, European Legacy and AlterNative, among others. He is the co-editor of a special

Malachi McIntosh is a Lecturer in English at the University of Cambridge. His work to date has focused on Caribbean, Black British and postcolonial writing and has been published in Wasafiri, Journal of West Indian Literature, Research in African Literatures and Journal of Romance Studies. He is currently editing a book on the life and works of Samuel Selvon and completing a monograph, provisionally titled Emigration and Caribbean Literature.

Sandro Mezzadra teaches political theory at the University of Bologna and is adjunct fellow at the Institute for Culture and Society of the University of Western Sydney. He has been visiting professor and research fellow in several institutions, including Humboldt Universität (Berlin), Duke University, Fondation Maison des sciences de l’homme (Paris), University of Ljubljana, FLACSO Ecuador and UNSAM (Buenos Aires). His work has particularly centred on the relations between globalization, migration and citizenship as well as on postcolonial theory and criticism. He is author of Diritto di fuga: Migrazioni, cittadinanza, globalizzazione (2006), La condizione postcoloniale: Storia e politica nel presente globale (2008) and, with Brett Neilson, Border as Method, or, the Multiplication of Labor (2013).

Maria Belén Ordóñez is an Assistant Professor in the Faculty of Liberal Arts & Science and School of Interdisciplinary Studies and Digital Futures at OCAD University, Toronto, with a specialization in Social Sciences and Feminist Theory. She is a member of the FemTechNet collective, teaching and developing curriculum for a Distributed Open Collaborative Course (DOCC) among a growing number of feminist scholars, activists and artists collaborating in online feminist pedagogy. Through unofficial channels of public pleasure, desire, affect and corporeal politics, Ordóñez’s research broadly explores alternative sexual citizenships, the destabilization of (hetero)normativity and the formation of publics in mediascapes. Her ethnographic research has been based in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver, where she engages with the affective impacts of events in disparate locations such as media headlines; queer-identified spaces of pleasure and activism; and the contested zones of censorship and regulation. Her research has included the investigation and tracking of affect in Canadian legislative challenges dealing with sex, sexuality and morality, specifically the cases of R v. Sharpe (child pornography), R v. Bedford (bawdy house laws), the police raid of the Taboo gay strip club (homophobic targeting of young gay strippers) in Montreal and Canadian legislation that raised the age of consent from 14 to 16 years of age. Ordóñez uses feminist methodologies and multisited ethnography to think and write about the emergence and undoing of public events.

Federico Rahola teaches Sociology of Culture at the University of Genova. He has been a research fellow and a professor at the University of Yvaskyla, Rio de Janeiro (UFRJ) and Recife. He is the author of Zone definitivamente temporanee (2003), with M. Guareschi, Chi decide? Critica della ragione eccezionalista (2011), and editor of Israele come paradigma (2008) and Palestina anno zero (2010).

Alex Tickell lectures in the Department of English at the Open University, UK. He is a literary historian and critic specializing in the fiction of colonial and postcolonial South Asia and has published widely on Indian-English writing, especially of the nineteenth century and the Edwardian period. In 2005 Tickell rediscovered and published the very first fiction in English by an Indian author, written by Kylas Dutt in 1835, in his edition of Shoshee Dutt’s short fictions, Selections from Bengaliana (2005). He has also published on colonial and anti-colonial literature, political violence and terrorism in his Routledge monograph Terrorism, Insurgency and Indian-English Literature 1830–1947 (2012), and his work on early Indian terrorists in Edwardian London appeared in Sumita Mukherjee and Rehana Ahmed (eds) South-Asian Resistances in Britain 1858–1947 (2011). He is presently co-investigator on a Leverhulme-funded research network on violence, urban infrastructures and literature. Tickell has also published on contemporary South Asian writing, including a Readers' Guide to Arundhati Roy's The God of Small Things (2007), and his current project is a book-length study of citizenship and fictions of the new India. He also is the editor of the forthcoming Palgrave collection South-Asian Fiction in English: Contemporary Transformations.

Janet Wilson is Professor of English and Postcolonial Studies at the University of Northampton, UK. She has published widely on the literature and cinema of the white settler societies of Australia and New Zealand through the lenses of postcolonial studies and diaspora theory and is a contributor to the Oxford History of the Novel. Her current interests are in diasporic writers who move between New Zealand and the UK (e.g. Fleur Adcock, Dan Davin, Katherine Mansfield and Anna Kavan) and postcolonial visual culture, especially of South Asian cultures. She has co-edited volumes on postcolonial studies: Global Fissures: Postcolonial Fusions (2006), Rerouting the Postcolonial: New Directions for the New Millennium (2010), New Zealand’s Cultures: Histories, Sources, Futures (2014), and three volumes of essays on Katherine Mansfield, including Katherine Mansfield and the (Post)colonial (2013). She represents Northampton in the EU-funded Marie Curie Initial Training Network, Constructions of Home and Belonging (with SOAS, Oxford, Munster, Mumbai and Stockholm); was Chair of EACLALS (2008–11), Vice-Chair of the London-based New Zealand Studies Network (UK and Ireland) (2011–14); and is Vice-Chair of the Katherine Mansfield Society and co-editor of the Journal of Postcolonial Writing. 