I am grateful to the Department of English Literature and the Institute for Advanced Studies in the Humanities at the University of Edinburgh for the exceptionally supportive and collegial research environment in which this project was completed. Particular thanks for valuable suggestions and feedback are due first and foremost to Suzanne Trill, as well as James Loxley, Dermot Cavanagh, Robert Irvine, Simon Malpas, and Kate Loveman at the University of Leicester. I could never have managed without the support of friends both within and beyond academia, and especially my three musketeers: Fionnuala O'Neill, Michelle Brown, and Elizabeth Elliott. I hope it won't be twenty years.

Generous funding for this work was provided by the Carnegie Trust for the Universities of Scotland and the University of Edinburgh. I would also like to thank the Beinecke Library at Yale, the British Library, the National Art Library, the National Portrait Gallery, the Huntington Library, and the National Archives for providing access to materials in their collections.

Portions of Chapters 2 and 3 in an earlier form first appeared in the Journal of Transformative Works and Cultures (September 2012, doi:10.3983/twc.2012.0399), while the second half of Chapter 4 was published in Authorship as 'Passing Through Vanity Fair: The Pilgrim's Progress in the Marketplace' (December 2012). My work on The English Rogue is forthcoming in Restoration in Spring 2015. I am grateful to the editors and reviewers of these publications for their comments, as well as to audiences at the conferences and seminars where I presented my work in progress.

This book is dedicated with love and gratitude to my family, and a tortoiseshell cat who was no help at all.
