Palgrave Studies in Nineteenth-Century Writing and Culture

General Editor: Joseph Bristow, Professor of English, UCLA

Editorial Advisory Board: Hilary Fraser, Birkbeck College, University of London; Josephine McDonagh, Kings College, London; Yopie Prins, University of Michigan; Lindsay Smith, University of Sussex; Margaret D. Stetz, University of Delaware; Jenny Bourne Taylor, University of Sussex

Palgrave Studies in Nineteenth-Century Writing and Culture is a new monograph series that aims to represent the most innovative research on literary works that were produced in the English-speaking world from the time of the Napoleonic Wars to the fin de siècle. Attentive to the historical continuities between ‘Romantic’ and ‘Victorian’, the series will feature studies that help scholarship to reassess the meaning of these terms during a century marked by diverse cultural, literary, and political movements. The main aim of the series is to look at the increasing influence of types of historicism on our understanding of literary forms and genres. It reflects the shift from critical theory to cultural history that has affected not only the period 1800–1900 but also every field within the discipline of English literature. All titles in the series seek to offer fresh critical perspectives and challenging readings of both canonical and non-canonical writings of this era.

Benjamin Bateman is Associate Professor of English and Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies and Director of the Center for the Study of Genders and Sexualities at California State University, Los Angeles. His articles have appeared in Modern Fiction Studies, Henry James Review, Twentieth-Century Literature, and Studies in American Culture. He recently completed a book manuscript entitled A Modernist Guide to Queer Survival, which focuses on Virginia Woolf, Oscar Wilde, Henry James, E. M. Forster, and Willa Cather.

Elizabeth Bleicher is Associate Professor of English, Academic Director of the Exploratory Program, and Coordinator of English Education at Ithaca College in Ithaca, New York. She teaches and conducts research on Victorian literature and culture, as well as pedagogy methods and student engagement in secondary and higher education. Her previous research has been published in Victorian Literature and Culture, Teaching and Teacher Education, and Honors in Practice, among other journals.

Jen Cadwallader is Assistant Professor of English at Randolph-Macon College, Ashland, Virginia, USA where she teaches Victorian literature and children’s literature. Most recently, she has published chapters in Victorian Literature: 21st Century Perspectives (2014) and Frances Hodgson Burnett’s The Secret Garden: A Children’s Classic at 100 (2011), and an article on A Christmas Carol in the Victorians Institute Journal (2012). Her research focuses on ghost stories and popular belief in the Victorian period.

Adrienne E. Gavin is Professor Emeritus of English Literature and Co-founder and Honorary Director of the International Centre for Victorian Women Writers (ICVWW), Canterbury Christ Church University, UK. She is author of Dark Horse: A Life of Anna Sewell (2004), the proposal for which won the Biographers’ Club Prize 2000, and has produced critical editions of Caroline Clive’s Paul Ferroll (2008), Henry de Vere Stacpoole’s The Blue Lagoon (2010), C. L. Pirkis’s The Experiences of Loveday Brooke, Lady Detective (2010), and Anna Sewell’s Black Beauty (2012). She is editor of The Child in British Literature: Literary Constructions of Childhood, Medieval to Contemporary (2012) and Robert Cormier (2012), and co-editor

Andrew F. Humphries has a PhD in English from the University of Kent and an MA from Cambridge University and is a Senior Lecturer in Education at Canterbury Christ Church University, UK. He teaches English primary and secondary education and also lectures in twentieth-century literature in the English and Language Studies Department. He is co-editor with Adrienne E. Gavin of the award-winning _Childhood in Edwardian Fiction: Worlds Enough and Time_ (Palgrave 2009). His main area of research is the work of D. H. Lawrence and he is currently rewriting his PhD Dissertation as a book entitled ‘“A Great Sense of Journeying”: Transport and Cultural Transition in the Novels of D. H. Lawrence’. He has also had essays published on H. G. Wells, E. M. Forster, and Robert Cormier.

Margaret Linley is a member of the English Department and Coordinator of the Print Culture Program at Simon Fraser University, Burnaby, Canada. A specialist in Victorian literature and culture, her research and teaching focus is Victorian literature and culture, the history of technology and media, nationhood, and empire. She has published articles in journals including _Victorian Poetry, Victorian Review, and Prism(s)_ and book chapters in _Nineteenth Century Media and the Construction of Identities, Christina Rossetti in Context_, and the _Blackwell Companion to Poetry_. Most recently she is co-editor of a collection of essays _Media, Technology, Literature in the Nineteenth-Century: Image, Sound, Touch_ (2011).

Peter Lowe teaches courses in English Literature at the Bader International Study Centre, Herstmonceux Castle, East Sussex, UK and studied at De Montfort University and the University of Durham. He is the author of the monographs _Christian Romanticism: T. S. Eliot’s Response to Percy Shelley_ (2006) and _English Journeys: National and Cultural Identity in the 1930s and 1940s_ (2012). His work has also appeared in the _Journal of Modern Literature, The Cambridge Quarterly, Romanticism, and Religion and Literature._

Paul March-Russell teaches Comparative Literature at the University of Kent, Canterbury, UK. He is the author of _The Short Story: An Introduction_
(2009) and co-editor with Maggie Awadalla of The Postcolonial Short Story (Palgrave 2012) and with Carmen Casaliggi of Legacies of Romanticism (2012). Modernism and Science Fiction will be published by Palgrave in 2015. He is editor of Foundation: The International Review of Science Fiction and commissioning editor for the series, SF Storyworlds (Gylphi).

Charlotte Mathieson is a Research Fellow in the Institute of Advanced Study at the University of Warwick, where she was awarded her PhD from the Department of English and Comparative Literary Studies in 2011. She researches Victorian literature, with an interest in the intersections of gender, space, and mobility in novels by authors including Charles Dickens, Charlotte Brontë, George Eliot, and Elizabeth Gaskell. Her publications include Gender and Space in Rural Britain, 1840–1920 (ed. with Gemma Goodman; 2014) and ‘“A brown sunburnt gentleman”: Masculinity and the Travelling Body in Dickens’s Bleak House’ (Nineteenth-Century Contexts, September 2014).

Courtney Salvey teaches Romantic and Victorian Literature at the University of Kent, UK, where she was awarded a PhD in 2014. Entitled ‘Mechanism and Meaning: British Natural Theology and the Literature of Technology, 1820–1840’, her doctoral thesis argues that natural theology’s continued plausibility was maintained by its technocultural context, particularly by the meanings of machines constructed through popular texts on technology. Interested in the intersections of literature, religion, and technology in nineteenth-century Britain, she has published on George MacDonald and Joseph Conrad and is preparing her thesis for publication.

Lorna Shelley is a Visiting Lecturer in English Literature at the University of Wolverhampton, UK. Her research interests include journalists as characters in late nineteenth-century fiction, female journalists and the periodical press, and Netta Syrett’s novels and short stories. Recent publications include: ‘Female Journalists and Journalism in fin-de-siècle Magazine Stories’ in the Journal of Nineteenth-Century Gender Studies (2009) and Female Journalists of the fin de siècle (2010). At present she is writing an article entitled ‘Journalism and Cross-Dressing in Anna Marsden’s Experiment (1899) by Ellen Williams’. She is also drafting a proposal for a monograph entitled Representations of Journalists and Magazine Culture in fin-de-siècle Fiction. Her next project involves the editorship of a collection of short stories by Netta Syrett.
Janet Stobbs Wright is a lecturer in the Humanities Department at the University of CEU Cardenal Herrera in Elche, Spain, where she teaches English in Education. She holds a PhD in English Studies from the University of Alicante, Spain, awarded for a thesis entitled ‘The Literary Trials of the Murderess: Marriage and Murder in Anglo-American Fiction, 1850s–1930s’. She has published work on the use of criminal trials in short stories by Edith Wharton and Susan Glaspell, and on the parallelisms in the use of private and public space in novels by Gertrude Atherton and F. Tennyson Jesse. Her most recent publication is a chapter on The Law and the Lady by Wilkie Collins in Women in Transit through Literary Liminal Spaces (eds. T. Gómez Reus and T. Gifford: 2013, Palgrave). At present, she continues research into the use of the trial as a narrative device in nineteenth-century and turn-of-the-century fiction, as well as participating in work on the subject of plagiarism in an interdisciplinary project at her university researching learning difficulties and competences (IDAC).

Lena Wånggren is a Research Fellow in English Literature at the University of Edinburgh, UK, where she also teaches. Her work concerns late nineteenth-century literature and culture, gender and feminist theory, textual editing, and the medical humanities. She has published on feminist pedagogy and on literature and medicine, and co-edited a special issue of Nineteenth-Century Gender Studies on gender and medicine (2013). She recently co-edited the book Corporeality and Culture: Bodies in Movement (2015) and a special issue of Somatechnics (2014), both concerning corporeality and culture.
