

Early Modern Literature in History

Series Editors
Cedric C. Brown
Dept. of English
University of Reading
Reading
United Kingdom

Andrew Hadfield
School of English
University of Sussex
Brighton
United Kingdom

Within the period 1520–1740, this large, long-running series, with international representation discusses many kinds of writing, both within and outside the established canon. The volumes may employ different theoretical perspectives, but they share an historical awareness and an interest in seeing their texts in lively negotiation with their own and successive cultures. Editorial board members: Sharon Achinstein, University of Oxford, UK John Kerrigan, University of Cambridge, UK Richard C McCoy, Columbia University, USA Jean Howard, Columbia University, USA Adam Smyth, Birkbeck, University of London, UK Cathy Shrank, University of Sheffield, UK Michelle O’Callaghan, University of Reading, UK Steven Zwicker, Washington University, USA Katie Larson, University of Toronto, Canada

More information about this series at <http://www.springer.com/series/14199>

Kathleen Miller

The Literary Culture of Plague in Early Modern England

palgrave
macmillan

Kathleen Miller
Salem, Massachusetts,
United States

Early Modern Literature in History
ISBN 978-1-137-51056-3      ISBN 978-1-137-51057-0 (eBook)
DOI 10.1057/978-1-137-51057-0

Library of Congress Control Number: 2016950442

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2016

The author(s) has/have asserted their right(s) to be identified as the author(s) of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made.

Cover image: Huntingdon Library

Printed on acid-free paper

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by Springer Nature

The registered company is Macmillan Publishers Ltd.

The registered company address is: The Campus, 4 Crinan Street, London, N1 9XW, United Kingdom

For Savannah

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I first became interested in plague writing of the early modern period during my master's studies at NUI Galway. Under Marie-Louise Coolahan's excellent supervision, I carried out research on early modern plague texts, which sparked my enduring fascination with how the transmission of plague texts was tied to their meaning. Marie-Louise's insightful comments on my writing while completing this monograph and her ongoing encouragement have been greatly appreciated.

My sincere thanks to my PhD supervisor at Trinity College Dublin, Crawford Gribben, for the time he has spent reading over my work and providing concise and thoughtful advice on my writing. He has provided unparalleled support and has been a wonderful mentor as I completed my postgraduate studies and this monograph. I would also like to thank my PhD examiners, Nicholas McDowell and Emma Vyroubalová, for their thorough advice on my completed dissertation, which helped to develop this project. In addition, I would like to acknowledge Michael Pyper, Caitlín Higgins Ní Chinnéide, Joshua Searle and my other peers on the Texts, Contexts, Cultures programme, as well as Mark Sweetnam—all of whom helped to shape my time at Trinity.

The guidance I have received while researching this monograph has allowed it to evolve in valuable directions. My research was greatly assisted by Elizabethanne Boran at the Edward Worth Library in Dublin, whose support has significantly advanced my study of plague in private book collections and as a subject of interest in the international book trade. I am also tremendously appreciative of Sarah C. E. Ross's advice on my work on Katherine Austen's Book M. I am grateful to Julianne Simpson at the Wellcome Library in London for her invitation to consider the Library's copy of The Christians Refuge, in addition to help I received from librarians at the Wellcome Library while reviewing their plague texts. I would also like to express my gratitude to staff at the British Library and Houghton Library at Harvard University for their help with accessing documents essential for preparing this work. In addition, I would like to acknowledge the help I received from the Huntington Library and The Rare Book and Manuscript Library at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign when procuring images for this monograph, as well as Medical History and Library & Information History for granting me permission to include material I had previously published in each journal.

I am grateful to the English faculty at NUI Galway and for the opportunity to lecture on the Renaissance body in English literature as part of the University's Studies in Renaissance Literature course during the period I worked on this monograph. I appreciate advice I received from Lindsay Ann Reid, Daniel Carey, Victoria Brownlee and Sean Ryder. I also want to express my sincere appreciation to Mary and Mark Hanley for their hospitality during my time in Galway.

Both Benjamin Doyle and Tomas René at Palgrave Macmillan have been a pleasure to work with, and I am grateful for the ongoing advice and support they have provided in the process of publishing this monograph.

This book would not have been possible without the encouragement and support of my parents, Wendy and Duncan, as well as help from my sister, Laura. My mother has provided unwavering assistance as I completed this monograph, for which I will always be grateful. Finally, I am truly thankful to my husband, Alan, whose reassurance and patience have been helpful each step of the way.

CONTENTS

1	Introduction	1
2	Continuities in Plague Writing	25
3	Medical Debates on Plague	57
4	Plague and Nonconformity	95
5	Katherine Austen's Reckoning with Plague in Book M	131
6	Pestilence and War	161
7	Pestilential Poesies	183
8	Conclusion: Recalling the Plague of 1665 in Later Literary Culture	211
	Bibliography	219
	Index	235

LIST OF FIGURES

- Fig. 2.1 Anonymous, The Mourning-Cross: Or, England's Lord Have Mercy Upon Us (1665). EB65 A100 B675b v.2 [No. A170 of the Marquess of Bute Broad­sides]. Houghton Library, Harvard University 29
- Fig. 2.2 Anonymous, The General Bill of Mortallity: With a Continuation of This Present Year, 1666 (1666). EB65 A100 B675b v.2 [No. A172 of the Marquess of Bute Broad­sides]. Houghton Library, Harvard University 30
- Fig. 3.1 Frontispiece and title page, George Thomson, Loimotomia: Or The Pest Anatomized (1666). Credit: 148060, The Huntington Library, San Marino, California 59
- Fig. 4.1 Frontispiece and title page, William Dyer, Christs Voice to London (1666). Credit: Courtesy of the Rare Book & Manuscript Library, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign 115
- Fig. 7.1 Frontispiece and title page, W. W., The Christians Refuge (1665). Credit: Wellcome Library, London 184