

Palgrave Studies in Modern Monarchy

Series Editors

Professor Axel Körner
University College London, UK

Dr Heather Jones
London School of Economics, UK

Dr Heidi Mehrkens
University of Aberdeen, UK

Professor Frank Lorenz Müller
University of St Andrews, UK

Aim of the Series

The death of Louis XVI on the scaffold in 1793 did not mark the beginning of the end of monarchy. What followed was a Long Nineteenth Century during which monarchical systems continued to be politically and culturally dominant both in Europe and beyond. They became a reference point for debates on constitutional government and understandings of political liberalism. Within multinational settings monarchy offered an alternative to centralised national states. Not even the cataclysms of the twentieth century could wipe monarchy completely off the political, mental and emotional maps. Studies in Modern Monarchy reflects the vibrancy of research into this topic by bringing together monographs and edited collections exploring the history of monarchy in Europe and the world in the period after the end of the ancien régime. Committed to a scholarly approach to the royal past, the series is open in terms of geographical and thematic coverage, welcoming studies examining any aspect of any part of the modern monarchical world.

More information about this series at <http://www.springer.com/series/14609>

Matthew Glencross • Judith Rowbotham • Michael D. Kandiah
Editors

The Windsor Dynasty 1910 to the Present

‘Long to Reign Over Us’?

palgrave
macmillan

Editors

Matthew Glencross
King's College London
London, United Kingdom

Judith Rowbotham
Plymouth University
Plymouth, United Kingdom

Michael D. Kandiah
King's College London
London, United Kingdom

Palgrave Studies in Modern Monarchy

ISBN 978-1-137-56454-2 ISBN 978-1-137-56455-9 (eBook)

DOI 10.1057/978-1-137-56455-9

Library of Congress Control Number: 2016958099

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2016

The author(s) has/have asserted their right(s) to be identified as the author(s) of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made.

Cover illustration: © Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix / Alamy Stock Photo

Printed on acid-free paper

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by Springer Nature

The registered company is Macmillan Publishers Ltd. London

The registered company address is: The Campus, 4 Crinan Street, London, N1 9XW, United Kingdom

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Editors would like to thank Her Majesty the Queen for her gracious permission to quote material from the Royal Archives Windsor, for which she holds the copyright; as would (in particular) Matthew Glencross, Ian Beckett, Heather Jones and Antony Best. The editors and contributors would also like to thank all Royal Archives Staff for their help in accessing the material held there; the material which has helped to make this volume so robust.

Our gratitude goes out also to Melanie Apsley of the Rothschild Archives, London for allowing the facilities of the archive to be used to host the conference ‘The Windsor Dynasty’, on 1 November 2012—an event which forms the basis of this collection and therefore without whom this would not have been possible. Our thanks also to the staff of the Institute of Contemporary British History, King’s College London, especially Virginia Preston for her support in the conference, and Andrew Blick for his comments and insights which have improved the quality of the volume.

The Editors would like to thank The National Archives, Kew, the National Library of Scotland, The British Library, Churchill Archives Centre Cambridge, the Bodleian Library Oxford and the National Army Museum for their permission to quote material held in their respective collections. Michael D. Kandiah also thanks Judie Sandeman Allen and the Earl of Woolton for permission to quote from the Woolton Diaries.

Thanks to Frank Muller, Heidi Mehrkens, Heather Jones and Axel Korner our series editors, for their support and insights, not only for this collection but for their help in advancing modern monarchy as a field of academic study.

We are also grateful to Emily Russell and Angharad Bishop and Rowan Milligan, her successor as Editorial Assistant at Palgrave for their helpful comments during the process of evolving and collating this volume. We are also grateful to Sharon Rajkumar and the production team in Chennai for accommodating necessary last minute changes!

Finally the Editors would like to thank not only the contributors for their efforts but also to thank our families, colleagues and friends for their continued support for us—they are too many to name individually, but they will remember who they are as their ears will have been regularly bashed over the period in which this volume has evolved. As all three of us know, achieving completion of this volume is both a tribute to the contributors who have responded to the challenge so magnificently, and to the tolerance of both the editors' and the contributors' various family members, scholars and the wide range of friends who have not given up on us, yet.

London, UK
Plymouth, UK
London, UK
April 2016

Matthew Glencross
Judith Rowbotham
Michael D. Kandiah

CONTENTS

1	Introduction	1
	Matthew Glencross, Judith Rowbotham, and Michael D. Kandiah
Part I	Setting the Scene	31
2	George V and the New Royal House	33
	Matthew Glencross
Part II	Establishing the Windsor Brand	57
3	The Ultimate Windsor Ceremonials: Coronations and Investitures	59
	Michael D. Kandiah, Judith Rowbotham, and Gillian Staerck
4	The Windsors and Ceremonial Events: State Occasions for the National Family	87
	Judith Rowbotham
5	Royalty and the Army in the Twentieth Century	109
	Ian F. W. Beckett

6	Measuring British Public Opinion on the Monarchy and the Royal Family	135
	Roger Mortimore
Part III	Marketing the Windsor Brand	157
7	The Abdication of Edward VIII: Legal and Constitutional Perspectives	159
	Robert Blackburn
8	The Nature of Kingship in First World War Britain	195
	Heather Jones
9	The Duke and the Dictator: The Royal Role in Marshal Tito's Visit to Britain, March 1953	217
	Andrew Harrison
10	'We Cannot Pretend That the Past Did Not Exist': The Windsor Dynasty and Japan, 1941–1971	239
	Antony Best
11	Epilogue: The Rise of 'The Queen'	259
	Matthew Glencross, Judith Rowbotham, and Michael D. Kandiah
	Index	269

CONTRIBUTOR BIOGRAPHIES

Ian F. W. Beckett is Emeritus Professor of Military History, University of Kent. His research focuses on British auxiliary forces, the First World War and the late Victorian army. He is a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society and Chairman of the Army Records society as well as Secretary to the Buckinghamshire Military Museum Trust.

Antony Best is Associate Professor in the International History Department, London School of Economics, and the department's PhD Programme Director. His research interests lie in Anglo-Japanese relations, the origins of the Pacific War; the international history of East Asia; the history of modern Japan, and intelligence and international history, where he has published extensively. He is also a convener of the Institute of Historical Research's International History Seminar.

Robert Blackburn is Professor of Constitutional Law, King's College London, and a specialist in political and constitutional affairs. He has acted as adviser to government and other official bodies on many occasions both in the UK and abroad. He is an honorary Queen's Counsel, and a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society.

Andrew Harrison is Media Officer at The National Archives, London, and a former journalist. He is currently studying for a PhD on British foreign policy towards Tito's Yugoslavia, at the Institute of Contemporary British History, King's College London.

Heather Jones is Associate Professor in the International History Department, London School of Economics. Dr Jones is a specialist in First World War Studies with a particular interest in the evolution of wartime violence and the cultural impact of the conflict in Britain, France and Germany. She is a member of the Board of Directors of the International Centre for the Research of the First World War at the Historial de la Grande Guerre, Péronne and an external associate of the Centre for War Studies at Trinity College, Dublin.

Roger Mortimore is Professor of Public Opinion and Political Analysis in the Institute of Contemporary British History as well as serving as Director of Political Analysis at Ipsos MORI. He has published books analysing public opinion during each of the last four general elections and has served as co-editor on the last three volumes in Palgrave Macmillan's Political Communications series.

Gillian Staerck is an independent scholar specialising in international history, formerly at the Institute of Contemporary British History, where she collaborated and published with Dr Michael D. Kandiah on the ICBH's Witness Seminar Programme between 1992 and 2003. Formerly Editor of Twentieth Century History Review, she remains a convenor of the IRH's International History Seminar.

EDITOR BIOGRAPHIES

Matthew Glencross is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow with Institute of Contemporary British History, King's College, London. His research lies in the field of contemporary royal history, from the late nineteenth century to the present, with particular focus on the external impact of the British royal family as well as on their employment of cultural and social rituals and ceremonial within Britain and its former Empire. Accompanying this, he is also interested more broadly in the role of elites and individuals especially those associated with diplomacy and its practices. His monograph, The Royal Tours of Edward VII: Reinventing Royal Diplomacy for the Twentieth Century, also appeared in the Palgrave Modern Monarchies series. He is a regular contributor to both television and radio and to the History & Policy website.

Judith Rowbotham is a Visiting Research Fellow in the School of Law, Plymouth University, and an established interdisciplinary scholar working particularly in the fields of law and history. Her long-standing research interests in socio-political and cultural history, alongside constitutional history and law, accompanies her other scholarly research focus, which is on crime and offending; and is all underpinned by her work on the use of printed primary sources, including newspapers, periodicals and novels. She has regularly collaborated with the Institute of Contemporary British History via the SOLON network (promoting interdisciplinary study in law, crime and history) but her research collaboration with Glencross and Kandiah now includes work on modern monarchy. One of the editors of the Routledge SOLON series, her publications also include Crime News in Modern Britain, 1820-2010 (Palgrave Macmillan, 2013).

Michael D. Kandiah is with Institute of Contemporary British History, King's College, London where he is Director of the Witness Seminar Programme, which seeks to capture oral testimony of key individuals involved in significant events in recent (British) history. His research focuses on elite oral histories and the evolution of appropriate methodologies for writing contemporary history using these in relation to significant events in contemporary British political, diplomatic and administrative history. Known particularly for his Witness Seminar series on British embassies in the last 60 years, he is currently working on a project with Matthew Glencross to explore royal state visits overseas. On the editorial team of British Scholar, he is also a founder member of Britain At Work, which seeks to promote the research, collection and preservation of oral histories of trades unionists and industrial workers.

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS

BL	British Library
CAC	Churchill Archives Centre, Cambridge
FO	Foreign Office
IWM	Imperial War Museum
NAA	National Archives, Australia
NAM	National Army Museum
NLS	National Library of Scotland
RA	Royal Archives, Windsor
TNA	The National Archives, Kew

LIST OF FIGURE

Fig. 8.1 Great War recruiting poster

201

LIST OF TABLES

Table 6.1	Monarch or president? Q. Do you think we should continue having a King or Queen as head of state, or would you prefer a President, as they have in America and some European countries?	140
Table 6.2	Monarchy or republic? Q. Would you favour Britain becoming a republic or remaining a monarchy?	141
Table 6.3	Does the monarchy have a future. Q. Looking to the future, do you think Britain will or will not have a monarchy in 50 years?	147
Table 6.4	Cost of the monarchy. Q. Do you agree or disagree with the following statements? 'The Royal Family should not receive as much money as it does'	150