

Palgrave Studies in European Political Sociology

Series Editor

Carlo Ruzza
University of Trento, Italy

Palgrave Studies in European Political Sociology addresses contemporary themes in the field of Political Sociology. Over recent years, attention has turned increasingly to processes of Europeanisation and globalisation and the social and political spaces that are opened by them. These processes comprise both institutional-constitutional change and new dynamics of social transnationalism. Europeanisation and globalisation are also about changing power relations as they affect people's lives, social networks and forms of mobility. The Palgrave Studies in European Political Sociology series addresses linkages between regulation, institution building and the full range of societal repercussions at local, regional, national, European and global level, and will sharpen understanding of changing patterns of attitudes and behaviours of individuals and groups, the political use of new rights and opportunities by citizens, new conflict lines and coalitions, societal interactions and networking, and shifting loyalties and solidarity within and across the European space. We welcome proposals from across the spectrum of Political Sociology including on dimensions of citizenship; political attitudes and values; political communication and public spheres; states, communities, governance structure and political institutions; forms of political participation; populism and the radical right; and democracy and democratization. This volume is a collaborative effort of a group of friends. That is probably why it was so smooth and pleasant in making. We first met in September 2014 at the University of Bologna Residential Centre of Bertinoro, in the beautiful Romagna hills, for a 1-day workshop on Europeanisation and LGBT activism in the post-Yugoslav space. More friends and colleagues then joined us at the Central European University in Budapest in March 2015 where our book project took its final shape. I would like to thank the authors of this volume for their patience, commitment, and willingness to repeatedly revise their contributions. I am also grateful to Eric Gordy, Gert Hekma, Stefano Bianchini, Maura De Bernart, Judit Takács, Éva Fodor, Elissa Helms, Sébastien Chauvin, and our Palgrave editors Harriet Barker and Amelia Derkatsch for their support and encouragement. This cooperation would not have been possible had it not been for the generous financial assistance of the European Research Agency and its Marie Curie Fellowship programme.

Čarna Brković is a postdoctoral fellow at the Graduate School for East and Southeast European Studies in Regensburg, Germany. She is a social anthropologist exploring the politics of survival and wellbeing, public spheres, and clientelism in former Yugoslav countries. After obtaining a Ph.D. (University of Manchester, 2012), she completed her postdoctoral fellowships at the CEU Institute for Advanced Study (2013/2014) and New Europe College, Institute for Advanced Studies (2014/2015).

Nicole Butterfield is a NEWFELPRO fellow at the Department of Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, University of Zagreb, Croatia. Previously, she was a lecturer in the English Department of the University of Szeged (Hungary) from 2012 to 2015, where she was also a member of the Gender Research Group. She received her Ph.D. from the Gender Studies Department at Central European University in 2014 in Budapest, Hungary.

Sanja Kajinić is a gender scholar and activist currently working as MIREES academic tutor and lecturer at the University of Bologna, School of Political Sciences, Forlì Campus. She received her Ph.D. from the Gender Studies Department of Central European University in Budapest, Hungary. Her research interests focus on feminist approaches to visual culture, social movement theory, and analysis of intersections of culture and politics.

Danijel Kalezić is president of the Montenegrin LGBTIQ Association “Queer Montenegro”. He has been an LGBT Human Rights activist since 2009 involved, from the beginning, in attempts to consolidate a LGBTIQ community in Montenegro. He has worked for 5 years for the NGO Juventas as a coordinator for their Human Rights Program, organising a range of projects both at the state and Europe wide levels. He was the initiator and organiser of the first “Montenegro Pride Rally” in Podgorica in 2013.

Ana Miškovska Kajevska is a freelance researcher, translator, and activist. She holds a Ph.D. degree in Social Sciences and a M.Sc. degree (cum laude) in Sociology and Gender Studies from the University of Amsterdam. Her Ph.D. dissertation on the war-related positionings of the Belgrade and Zagreb feminists in the 1990s won the 2015 Gender and Politics Ph.D. Prize of the European Consortium for Political Research. She has finished the Zagreb-based programmes in Women’s Studies and Peace Studies, and has an extensive experience in environmental and human (women’s, reproductive, and sexual) rights activism.

Piro Rehxepe is a scholar of East European Studies currently teaching at the Center for Global Affairs, New York University. He holds a Ph.D. in Politics from the University of Strathclyde, UK (2013). His research is located in the field of queer and feminist theories in international relations with special interest in Islam and South East Europe.

Adelita Selmić studied sociology and philosophy at the University of Zagreb and holds an M.A. in Human Rights and Democracy in South East Europe, a degree jointly awarded by the University of Bologna and the University of Sarajevo. She is interested in LGBT and human rights activism in the post-Yugoslav space. She has worked in various NGOs, and as a journalist and educator, and is mostly focused on youth work. She currently works as a sociology teacher in a comprehensive school in Sisak, Croatia.

Paul Stubbs is a UK-born sociologist who is currently senior research fellow at the Institute of Economics, Zagreb, Croatia. Previously, he was a Lecturer in Social Work at the University of Bradford, UK, and a research fellow of the Globalism and Social Policy Programme, a collaboration between STAKES, Helsinki, Finland, and the University of Sheffield, UK. His work, at the junction of activism/advocacy, research, and consultancy, focuses on policy translation, ethnography, international actors and social policy, and social movements in South East Europe.
