Foreword

The Fourth Keynes Seminar was held in the University of Kent at Canterbury on 17 November 1978. Its theme of Keynes and Bloomsbury reflected the aim of Professor Spence, first Master of Keynes College whose inspiration lies behind the seminars, that the wide-ranging interests and achievements of Lord Keynes should be mirrored in the topics discussed. Those of us on the organising committee were deeply grateful to our distinguished speakers, Mr Shone, Professor Williams and Professor Bell, for accepting our invitation, and giving us papers of such wit, elegance and erudition. It has been a source of great satisfaction that as the seminars have continued previous speakers and participants have been happy to return and introduce a degree of continuity to them. On this occasion we had with us Miss Mary Glasgow, Mr Terence Higgins and Professors Corry and Skidelsky. Mr Stephen Keynes and Dr Milo Keynes were again with us, and I would like to record the College's appreciation of the interest they show in our affairs; in accepting honorary membership of our Senior Common Room they have, as it were, thrown in their lot with us, as also has Mr Farmiloe of Macmillan whose support for the seminars is much valued. Two people who had very much hoped to take part were Lord Kahn and Professor Sargeant Florence, and it was a matter of considerable regret that illness denied us the contribution they would have made.

The Seminar Committee wish to thank the Vice-

Chancellor, Dr Templeman, the Faculty of Social Sciences of the University and Macmillan for the financial support which makes the seminars possible—and the audience drawn from the University, the city and county which makes it an encouraging experience.
