I wish to thank my mother, Verdie Todd, for her optimism, and my father, Grover Todd, for always urging me to do things the 'right way'. To my husband Dale, I give heartfelt thanks for tolerating my lapses of humour and for his calming influence. Patricia Stranahan and Betty M. Unterberger provided invaluable editorial advice at different stages of this project, as did Chester A. Dunning, Roger Beaumont, and Arnold P. Krammer. John D. Robertson was unfailingly supportive and enthusiastic in his guidance and direction. Ralph T. Fisher and the staff of the Slavic and East European Studies Institute of the University of Illinois were extremely courteous and helpful during crucial periods of research. Woody Smith and Ralph J. Q. Adams provided training and technical advice. Susan D. Roberts, Katherine O'Keefe, and Dennis Berthold inspired me with confidence and friendship, as well as a desire to learn. Patricia Tollison helped make this book a reality by giving me the courage to let it happen. Finally, my deepest appreciation must go to my friend and mentor, Candida J. Lutes, and to my ever-faithful companion, Beauregard Baum.
