Acknowledgements

This book started life as an undergraduate course, and I owe a considerable debt to all the students who helped formulate the ideas and arguments which follow. My thanks also go to my colleagues at the University of East Anglia: Albert Weale, Tim O’Riordan, Ray Kemp, Alan Cottey and John Greenaway, and friends elsewhere, in particular Mike Stephens, Tim Giles and Ian Forbes. My publisher Steven Kennedy has not only been patient, he has done much to improve my efforts, as has my editor, Keith Povey. Matt Cliffe and Andrew Webster kindly read a draft manuscript, and helped me to clarify my thoughts. Steve Smith has far exceeded the obligations of a good friend and colleague; he has combined criticism with encouragement, and I am very grateful for both. And finally, my thanks to Alex, Jack and Marian Brandon for all sorts of things which reduced the miseries of writing a book and enhanced the pleasures.
