A big project like this Handbook means that you incur debts, and not only to your authors and your publisher. As editors we, along with our colleague Elaine Unterhalter who edited the section on postcolonialism, would like to thank most warmly those authors who delivered on time, and who did not fuss but just got on and did a first-rate job. We would also like to thank all authors who did deliver – which was almost everyone we asked. We know that some of our authors worked in very difficult private circumstances as they were finishing their chapters and we hope the publication of the Volumes will, later, be for them a happy reminder of difficulties and disasters overcome.

The only sad theme is that some very close colleagues, with whom we were working and for whom we had the greatest respect and liking, became very ill (and died) while the volumes were being prepared. We decided to ask for copyright permissions to publish something of theirs. These permissions were graciously given by two major journals and with the agreement also of our publishers Springer, Rolland Paulston and Terry McLaughlin have examples of their writing in this Handbook.

We know it is going to embarrass her and she no doubt will take advantage of working in the same building to reprove Bob Cowen directly, but we wanted especially to note the major contribution to these Volumes of Elaine Unterhalter who combines a genuine independence of mind and spirit with a charming sense of what it is to work in a small team, to soak up pressure and to deliver on time. We are very grateful to her and to her colleague Helen Paulsen who provided us with technically perfect copy, address lists, Notes on Authors, Abstracts, and so on. We had problems enough of our own – it was a treat to deal with another small team that did the job faster, more neatly, and with less fuss.

Our two institutions – the Institute of Education within the University of London and the University of Wisconsin-Madison – provided crucial infrastructures for controlling the project, notably computing services backed by the inestimable assistance of Apple specialist Jem Dowse in the Institute and the last-minute computer skills of Lefteris Klerides which helped keep Bob Cowen calmer than he thought he was going to be.

However, it was not just an infrastructure thing. Both of us were in each other’s universities from time to time and Bob Cowen would like to thank Tom Popkewitz and Mike Apple who made him feel especially welcome in Wisconsin and Andreas
Kazamias would like to thank Jagdish Gundara and Gerald Grace who made him feel especially welcome inside the Institute of Education. Much of the project was actually edited in a small office inside Bob Cowen’s new ‘department’ – Curriculum, Pedagogy, and Assessment – in the Institute of Education which was reorganized internally during the life of this project. He would like to thank colleagues within Curriculum, Pedagogy, and Assessment for welcoming a relative stranger – especially Denis Lawton with whom Bob (and Andreas for much of this project) was privileged to share a room. With the calm wisdom for which Denis is famed, he planned his visits to the Institute with exquisite care for quite some time.

We thank him and all other colleagues in many countries – it is the unexpected extra kindnesses which is so touching – for their help and support. The project finally got completed. We are still not exactly sure how; but it did. Like many other people we also look forward to reading the Volumes. It is difficult to grasp their full scope and complexity. They contain some surprises and a flurry of implications – captured in the writing of our authors – for future work in comparative education.
