Acknowledgments

I'd first like to thank Greg Hutcheson and Joe Blackmore, editors of Queer Iberia, who put the idea of a collection of queer essays on Italian literature in my head, and Michael Flamini, editor at St. Martins, for approaching me about the project at the Medieval Studies Congress at Kalamazoo in 1999 (at a session entitled "Queering the Italian Middle Ages"). Members of the Lesbian and Gay Studies Caucus of the American Association for Italian Studies have provided inspiration through the fabulous sessions they have organized over the years. My many queer colleagues in the DePaul LGBT faculty group deserve praise for helping create such a queer-friendly environment there. I am grateful also to the DePaul Humanities Center for giving me the opportunity to discuss the project with wonderful colleagues who generously offered advice and encouragement. My friends in the Department of Modern Languages have provided crucial more support through some tough times, especially Clara Orban and Andrew Suozzo. I'd like to thank Armand Cerbone for listening and for his insight. My thanks also to the many LGBT friends and acquaintances in Italy who have allowed me to spend time with them and learn something about their lives. Finally, love and thanks to my friends in the United States, especially Rob Garofalo, Rich DeNatale, and Arthur Little, for making me to write about – and be part of – queer culture in the first place.
