

THE GENDER FACTORY

The Apportionment of Work
in American Households

THE GENDER FACTORY

The Apportionment of Work
in American Households

Sarah Fenstermaker Berk
University of California, Santa Barbara
Santa Barbara, California

PLENUM PRESS • NEW YORK AND LONDON

---

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

Berk, Sarah Fenstermaker.
The gender factory.

Bibliography: p.

Includes index.

1. Housewives—United States. 2. Sexual division of labor—United States. 3. Home economics—United States. I. Title.

HD6073.H842U62 1985

305.3

84-24861

ISBN-13: 978-1-4612-9461-0

e-ISBN-13: 978-1-4613-2393-8

DOI: 10.1007/978-1-4613-2393-8

---

© 1985 Plenum Press, New York

Softcover reprint of the hardcover 1st edition 1985

A Division of Plenum Publishing Corporation

233 Spring Street, New York, N.Y. 10013

All rights reserved

No part of this book may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, microfilming, recording, or otherwise, without written permission from the Publisher

To all the Vesles—for their loving versatility

And to my mother

Acknowledgments

This book has been a long time in the making. Its role as the "second question" in a larger research project, its timing as a "post-tenure" monograph, and the demands of the analysis itself has meant a longer time from conception to fruition. It has also meant that greater numbers of people have made valuable contributions to it.

Those who lent time and encouragement to the original household labor research project have been acknowledged in an earlier monograph (Berk and Berk, 1979), but I must again thank Eliot Liebow of the Center for the Study of Metropolitan Problems at NIMH for his early and crucial support of the project. In 1976, there was no household labor research "bandwagon," but Eliot Liebow heard the drums anyway.

Since then, I have been fortunate to receive additional support through the University of California, Santa Barbara Academic Senate research funds, and through a UCSB Faculty Career Development Award. Another taken-for-granted but nonetheless critical source of support came from the facilities and staff of UCSB's Social Process Research Institute. Those who actually have a "room of one's own" know there there is no more valued possession. SPRI provided me with mine.

A number of students and staff gave time to the complicated data processing and manuscript preparation required by the project. Chris Allen, Nancy Blum, Trina Marks Miller, David Rauma, Tony Shih, and Karen Steinberg earned my gratitude many times over for the care they took with my work.

I am especially grateful to those colleagues who read portions of the manuscript in its various incarnations over a three year period. The student members of the Department of Sociology's Graduate Seminar on Gender Research provided direction in both early and later stages of the writing. The first and last chapters benefited greatly from the meticulous attentions of Phyllis Newton and Vesle Fenstermaker.

Through their own innovative work on gender, Spencer Cahill, Candace West, and Don Zimmerman provided me with just the intellectual push I needed to integrate some of my own thinking. And their unexpected enthusiasm about my work ultimately made me value my argument concerning the accomplishment of gender through the apportionment of household labor. I also thank Peter Rossi for orchestrating the final push to publication of the book. His attention to the work, his encouragement, and his sponsorship, made the transition from manuscript to publication a painless one.

Without the advice, criticism, and support given me by my husband, Richard Berk, this book would still have been written. But, undoubtedly it would have suffered in many important respects. It would surely have been less honest, more tentative, and most importantly, less "mine." His ability and willingness to influence others by encouraging their best—and not solely his own—makes Richard Berk my most valued colleague and friend.

Finally, I owe a continuing debt of gratitude to those project respondents, friends, and women I know only through their own writings, who have (over the last decade) patiently taught me what it is—what it must be—to practice feminist scholarship. By example and through the immediacy of their own needs, they have shown me the seductiveness of producing polemic dressed up as scholarship, or "acceptable" scholarship dressed up as service to women. In either instance, the experience of women is denied, and both feminism and scholarship lose. Thus, whatever is of value in this work owes a great deal to the experience, knowledge, and past trials of other women.

Contents

CHAPTER 1. CONCEPTUALIZING THE DIVISION OF HOUSEHOLD LABOR .....	1
Introduction .....	1
Who Does What: Some Empirical Generalizations .....	3
Traditional Conceptual Frameworks: Two Examples .....	10
The New Home Economics: Reluctant Materialism .....	20
An Overview of the Analysis .....	35
CHAPTER 2. MEASURING HOUSEHOLD AND MARKET LABORS ....	37
Introduction and Background .....	37
The Measurement of Household Labor .....	39
The Measurement of Market Labor Time .....	56
Household and Market Work: Endogenous Variables .....	57
CHAPTER 3. SAMPLE CHARACTERISTICS AND INITIAL DESCRIPTION .....	59
Introduction .....	59
The Sample .....	59
Household Members' Market Time and Household Labor ..	63
Additional Measures of the Division of Labor .....	67
Conclusions .....	78

X CONTENTS

CHAPTER 4. THE HOUSEHOLD "PIE": MARKET TIME, HOUSEHOLD TASKS, AND HOUSEHOLD TIME .....	79
Introduction .....	79
Describing the Household "Pie" .....	82
Model Specification .....	85
Model 1: Market Time and Household Tasks .....	99
Model 2: The Minutes per day of Market and Household Labor .....	110
Overview and Conclusions: The Household "Pie" .....	119
CHAPTER 5. DIVIDING IT UP: THE MECHANISMS OF ASYMMETRY .....	125
Introduction .....	125
The Model .....	127
Slicing the "Pie" .....	139
Conclusion: A "Gendered" Allocation System .....	164
CHAPTER 6. WIVES' TIME: ANOTHER VIEW .....	167
Introduction .....	167
A Partial Model .....	168
Findings and Discussion .....	175
Conclusions and Speculations .....	180
CHAPTER 7. CONCLUSIONS: WORK AND GENDER .....	185
Introduction and Reprise .....	185
Managing the Division of Labor: Consensus and Equity ...	186
The Structures of Household Labor .....	195
Mechanisms of Choice and Constraint .....	199
A Final Note on Change .....	208

REFERENCES .....	213
APPENDIX A: Diary Instructions .....	225
APPENDIX B: Household Work Study .....	229
APPENDIX C: Content of Household Work-Task Codes .....	233
APPENDIX D: Household Activities Sorted by Husbands in Order of Accomplishment .....	245
INDEX .....	247