

African Histories and Modernities

Series Editors

Toyin Falola

The University of Texas at Austin

Austin, TX, USA

Matthew M. Heaton

Virginia Tech

Blacksburg, VA, USA

This book series serves as a scholarly forum on African contributions to and negotiations of diverse modernities over time and space, with a particular emphasis on historical developments. Specifically, it aims to refute the hegemonic conception of a singular modernity, Western in origin, spreading out to encompass the globe over the last several decades. Indeed, rather than reinforcing conceptual boundaries or parameters, the series instead looks to receive and respond to changing perspectives on an important but inherently nebulous idea, deliberately creating a space in which multiple modernities can interact, overlap, and conflict. While privileging works that emphasize historical change over time, the series will also feature scholarship that blurs the lines between the historical and the contemporary, recognizing the ways in which our changing understandings of modernity in the present have the capacity to affect the way we think about African and global histories.

Editorial Board

Akintunde Akinyemi, Literature, University of Florida, Gainesville
Malami Buba, African Studies, Hankuk University of Foreign Studies, Yongin, South Korea

Emmanuel Mbah, History, CUNY, College of Staten Island

Insa Nolte, History, University of Birmingham

Shadrack Wanjala Nasong'o, International Studies, Rhodes College

Samuel Oloruntoba, Political Science, TMAILI, University of South Africa

Bridget Teboh, History, University of Massachusetts Dartmouth

More information about this series at

<http://www.palgrave.com/gp/series/14758>

Jeff Schauer

Wildlife between Empire and Nation
in Twentieth-Century
Africa

palgrave
macmillan

Jeff Schauer
University of Nevada
Las Vegas, NV, USA

African Histories and Modernities

ISBN 978-3-030-02882-4 ISBN 978-3-030-02883-1 (eBook)

<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-030-02883-1>

Library of Congress Control Number: 2018961052

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s), under exclusive licence to Springer Nature Switzerland AG, part of Springer Nature 2019

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use. The publisher, the authors, and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover credit: ZUMA Press, Inc. / Alamy Stock Photo

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG

The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

To family

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Modest though its contribution is, the debts accumulated in writing this book are legion. This book and I have benefited from the eyes, ears, hearts, and minds of many people, some of whom are undoubtedly neglected here, and none of whom are responsible for its inadequacies. Most recently, I have been very fortunate in the conscientious editorial support from Palgrave Macmillan and the press' readers. Megan Laddusaw and Christine Pardue have been fantastic to work with, and I am grateful for Toyin Falola's encouragement. The Journal of British Studies and African Studies Review also allowed me to reproduce material here.

At the beginning, faculty mentors at the University of California, Irvine, encouraged me to start the thinking that has led to this book. I am grateful for mentorship by James Egan, Paulo Simoes, David Iglar, Rudi Berkelhamer, and David Kay, and particularly the ongoing support from Doug Haynes and Laura Mitchell. During a formative undergraduate year at King's College, London, Andrew Dilley and David Carpenter helped to set me on this path. I spent six happy years as a graduate student at the University of California, Berkeley, and am grateful for the financial and intellectual support of the Department of History, and the Centers for British and African Studies. At different stages, Alan Karras, Tom Metcalf, Joseph Omwamba, Abena Osseo-Asare, Jeff Romm, Martha Saavedra, Ethan Shagan, and Jonathan Sheehan provided mentorship. I was lucky to be part of cohorts and communities including Nora Barakat, Angelo Caglioti, Chris Church, Jon Cole, Graham Foreman, Rob Harkins, Katie Harper, Penny Ismay, Riyad Koya, Radhika Natarajan, Carrie Ritter, Tehila Sasson, Caroline Shaw, and many others. And I benefited from the labor and attributes of a supportive committee: Michael Watts' advice; Tom Laqueur's infectious intellectual joy; Tabitha Kanogo's kind guidance; and James Vernon's model mentorship—defined by humanity, responsibility, activism, and community mindedness—a source of inspiration in the sometimes-grimy world of academia.

My new home is the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, where I am grateful for the moral and material support of the Department of History and the College of Liberal Arts. In the former, Annette Amdal, Heather Nepa, Shontai Wilson-Beltran, and Matt Fledderjohann helped me to navigate department and university bureaucracy. In the latter, deans Chris Hudgins, Chris Heavey, and Jennifer Keene, and associate dean John Tuman supported my work. I benefit from the wisdom, intellectual support, and kindness of a department full of wonderful colleagues, among whom I must single out a few. Paul Werth and Andy Fry—important mentors—read this manuscript in its entirety with keen eyes, and Michael Alarid, John Curry, and AB Wilkinson read a crucial chapter. Michelle Tusan has read or heard everything in this book and many things that didn't make the cut in various permutations over many years, offering astute, actionable comments. I regularly seek and receive advice from Willy Bauer, Raquel Casas, Cian McMahon, Elizabeth Nelson, David Tanenhaus, and Tom Wright. Michael Green and Austin Dean are friends and colleagues who have also kept our plants alive during long absences, no mean feat in the intemperate Mojave!

David Tanenhaus, Paul Werth, and Andy Kirk have been supportive chairs. For assistance and community, I am also grateful to Sheila Bock, Greg Brown, Caryll Dziedziak, Priscilla Finley, Marcie Gallo, Joanne Goodwin, Michelle Kuenzi, Colin Loader, Mark Padoongpatt, Vince Perez, Anita Revilla, Mary Wammack, Charles Whitney, Elspeth Whitney, and others. Discussions with graduate students in two courses on colonialism encouraged me to think harder about the big picture as I revisited drafts; I'm particularly grateful to Stephen Bohigian, Laura Jule, Kristina Lewis, and Evgenia Sablina.

But the most important work has been done in archives and libraries on three continents, and I am profoundly thankful for the labors of many people in those sometimes-besieged places who have sustained my work and that of many researchers. I am grateful to the staff of the Library of Congress' Manuscripts Room, and Jon Putnam, Steve Morris, and Rudy D'Alessandro at the U.S. National Park Service Office of International Affairs. In Britain, I am thankful to the staff at the National Archives, Senate House Library, University of Cambridge Library, Bodleian Libraries, and to Carol Davis at the Kendal Museum, Robert Miles and Jody Butterworth at the British Library, and James Hatton at the Natural History Museum. Michael Palmer at the Zoological Society of London archive led me to the Poles journals, which are used here with Amanda Tarrant's kind permission. Becky Coombs and Loraine Gelthorpe managed a stay at Pembroke College, Cambridge, during which I benefited from the wisdom of Bill Adams, Felicitas Becker, and Emma Hunter. David Anderson and Megan Vaughan helped to spur the opening of the Nuffield Unit of Tropical Animal Ecology records at Cambridge's Zoology Library on my behalf, and I thank Michael Akam, Clare Castle, Jane Acred, and Jacky Cox for facilitating access to the collection.

In Kenya, I must thank Peterson Kithuka and particularly Richard Ambani, patron saint of researchers at the wonderful Kenya National Archives. I am grateful to Antony, Fred, Freddy, Rose, Consolat, Priscilla, Jacky, and Felix for making me at home at the YMCA on State House road for many long stays. Thanks to David Gathoni, Mike Sang, and Ken Owade. In Uganda, I am indebted to the staffs at Makerere University's library, the National Library, Uganda Management Institute, Parliament of Uganda, and Uganda Wildlife Authority, particularly Gerald Watebawa at the latter. Thanks also to Innocent Taremwa and Paul Sempebwa. Director Chileshe Lusale-Musukuma's stellar staff at the National Archives of Zambia made NAZ a particularly fruitful and pleasant place to work in. I am grateful for the intellectual stimulation offered by the Southern African Institute for Policy and Research and its executive director Manenga Ndulo. Marja Hinfelaar, also of SAIPAR, has been a kind mentor and careful reader, and Hikabwa Chipande and Egil Droge provided, respectively, historical and contemporary insights into Zambia's history and conservation world.

William Beinart, Jane Carruthers, Bernhard Gissibl, Peter Hoffenberg, Louisa Lombard, Stuart Marks, Marc Matera, Meredith McKittrick, Richard Mtisi, Ken Opalo, Susan Pennybacker, Felix Schürmann, Julie Weiskopf, and Aaron Windel offered support, conversation, leads, and suggestions. I also thank a few long-time mentors: Bobbie Eastwood, Linda Sparks, John Taylor, Debbie Diner, Linda Swayne, and Warren Swanson.

There will be many people left off this list, but I must express my gratitude to wonderful friends, all of whom offered the sustenance of fellowship, conversation, and profound humanity that sustained much work and writing which I treasure and seek to carry with me: Kartikeya Date, Jeffrey Crosby, Mahendra Prasad, John Wyrwas, Vivek Ramamurthy,

Greg Moore, Lexi Lambeck, Gilmer Contreras, Daniel Hogan, Siva Darbha, Jeremy Prickett, Ingunn Grip Fjaer, Brian Gould, Norma Altschuler, Timo Hoffmann, Meg Braun, Selina Makana, Rachel Jamison, Gathu Kirubi, Sarah Theiner, Ivan Tochitsky, Ida Sognaes, Seb Benthall, Vasundhara Sirnate, Chen Chen, Agnes Cornell, Ida Cathrine Ruud, Vinicius Vieira, and others. Kuba Kolodziejczyk and Alethia Alfonso provided a research home in London; Alethia has been a long-time friend and source of support, inclusive of sharp wit and hiking camaraderie. Thanks further to the skype book club members for giving me an excuse to read fiction, and the backpacking crew for summer journeys into the Sierra.

I might call Las Vegas home, but the Pros/Sundberg families have not only welcomed me into their family; they offer a much-needed summer refuge each year in Sweden, and have my thanks and appreciation.

My longest and deepest debts are to the family strung across California's forested foothills and sparkling coasts. Helen Schauer, Robert Flores, Adele Flores, and Lloyd Clifton passed away during the span of this project, but memories, their outsized personalities, and love remain. The extended Flores/Rodriguez family and Lynne Clifton have given meals, rides, places to live and rest, encouragement, laughter, love, and an inspiring example of family solidarity. Taylor, Angie, and Josh are reservoirs of warmth as sisters and a brother-in-law. And my parents, Jeff and Veronica Schauer, who offer my sisters and me all of their support and the models of their lives, forever have my gratitude, love, and respect. At some level, home will always be a flickering wood fire, glowing gas lamps, the liveliness of the woods, the sound of the creek, and the peace that my parents created in that world.

Sandra Pros has given too much to recount in enriching our life together, and to me and my work and life. I treasure, and hope to return, her friendship and love every day.

Thanks, gracias, tack så mycket, and asanteni sana to all.

Las Vegas, Nevada
August 20, 2018

CONTENTS

1	Introduction	1
2	Imperial Ark: Imperial Preservationists and African Wildlife	17
3	Governing the Game: Expertise, Administration, and the Making of Colonial Wildlife Policy in Uganda and Northern Rhodesia	29
4	Government Cattle: Anti-Wildlife Politics in East and Central Africa	71
5	Deferring Uhuru : Decolonization and the Coming of the Global Wildlife Preservation Movement	109
6	Pachyderms and Parks: Ecological Politics and East Africa's National Parks	157
7	National Conservation: Kenya, Britain, and World Bank and Global Entanglements	201

8 Conclusion	247
---------------------	------------

Bibliography	257
---------------------	------------

Index	275
--------------	------------

ABBREVIATIONS

ANC	African National Congress (Zambia)
AWLF	African Wildlife Leadership Foundation
CAWM	College of African Wildlife Management
EAWLS	East African Wildlife Society
FPS	Fauna Preservation Society
IMF	International Monetary Fund
IUCN	International Union for the Conservation of Nature (formerly IUPN)
KLFA	Kenya Land and Freedom Army
NUTAE	Nuffield Unit of Tropical Animal Ecology
SPFE	Society for the Preservation of the Fauna of the Empire
UNIP	United National Independence Party (Zambia)
WWF	World Wildlife Fund

LIST OF FIGURES

Fig. 1.1	Africa amid the transition from empire to nation-state. (United States Central Intelligence Agency, Africa, May , [Washington, DC: Central Intelligence Agency, 1965], https://loc.gov/item/97687655/)	4
Fig. 3.1	Ugandan game warden Charles Pitman's survey created the blueprint for Northern Rhodesia's Game Department. (The National Archives of the UK, CO323/1689/15)	43
Fig. 3.2	Like the game ranger seated here alongside a chief, facing villagers and game guards, Northern Rhodesia's Game Department was embedded in colonial societies and political economies. (The National Archives of the UK, INF10/381/30)	50
Fig. 3.3	A romanticized portrayal of game guards on an Ulendo in Northern Rhodesia. (The National Archives of the UK, INF10/381/31)	56
Fig. 4.1	Hunters on the Kafue Flats defied the colonial government to defend their hunting rights. (The National Archives of the UK, INF10/380/45)	85
Fig. 5.1	Fears of poaching coupled with colonial anxieties about armed Africans to reinvigorate preservationists. (The National Archives of the UK, INF10/161/35)	114
Fig. 5.2	International preservationists used language seen here at the entrance to Nairobi Royal National Park to claim Africa's wildlife for the world. (The National Archives of the UK, INF10/161/1)	126

- Fig. 6.1 The Galana River Game Management Scheme—under construction here—represented an early albeit flawed effort to address poaching through community conservation. (The National Archives of the UK, INF10/171/65) 171
- Fig. 6.2 Royal Navy helicopters help with an elephant count in the contested Tsavo East National Park. (The National Archives of the UK, INF10/161/36) 176