This book series explores the relationship between cultural heritage and conflict. The key themes of the series are the heritage and memory of war and conflict, contested heritage, and competing memories. The series editors seek books that analyze the dynamics of the past from the perspective of tangible and intangible remnants, spaces, and traces as well as heritage appropriations and restitutions, significations, musealizations, and mediatizations in the present. Books in the series should address topics such as the politics of heritage and conflict, identity and trauma, mourning and reconciliation, nationalism and ethnicity, diaspora and intergenerational memories, painful heritage and terracescapes, as well as the mediated reenactments of conflicted pasts. Dr. Ihab Saloul is associate professor of cultural studies, founder and research vice-director of the Amsterdam School for Heritage, Memory and Material Culture (AHM) at University of Amsterdam. Saloul's interests include cultural memory and identity politics, narrative theory and visual analysis, conflict and trauma, Diaspora and migration as well as contemporary cultural thought in the Middle East. Professor Rob van der Laarse is research director of the Amsterdam School for Heritage, Memory and Material Culture (AHM), and Westerbork Professor of Heritage of Conflict and War at VU University Amsterdam. Van der Laarse's research focuses on (early) modern European elite and intellectual cultures, cultural landscape, heritage and identity politics, and the cultural roots and postwar memory of the Holocaust and other forms of mass violence. Dr. Britt Baillie is an Honorary Research Fellow at the Wits City Institute, University of the Witwatersrand and a founding member of the Centre for Urban Conflict Studies at the University of Cambridge. Baillie's interests include the politics of cultural heritage, urban heritage, religious heritage, living heritage, heritage as commons, and contested heritage.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am grateful to the Department of Politics, Languages and International Studies at the University of Bath for funding research trips that were crucial to the completion of this book. Many current and former colleagues have offered their encouragement along the way, in particular Dr. Nina Parish, Professor Anna Bull, Professor Hanna Diamond and Professor Bill Niven.

My thanks go also to interviewees and others in Germany who shared their experiences and expertise, as well as providing me with valuable access to archive material: Dr. Gerhard Sälter of the Gedenkstätte Berliner Mauer; Ingolf Notzke of Initiativgruppe Geschlossener Jugendwerkhof Torgau e.V.; Sylvia Wähling and Dr. Ralf Marten of Menschenrechtszentrum Cottbus e.V.; Stefanie Kröger of the Archiv der sozialen Demokratie (Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung); the staff of the library of the Bundesstiftung zur Aufarbeitung der SED-Diktatur.

I am grateful to the publishers of the following earlier versions of material that appears in this book for their permission to re-use it here:

“Compensating the Victims of Human Rights Abuses in the German Democratic Republic: The Struggle for Recognition,” German Politics 12 (1), 2012: 17–33.

“Constructing Victimhood in Divided Germany: The Case of the Association of the Victims of Stalinism (1950–1989)”, Memory Studies. Online. 13 January 2017.

“Understanding Controversies over Memorial Museums: The Case of the Leistikowstraße Memorial Museum, Potsdam”, History and Memory 29 (1), 2017, 41–71.

“Representing the Experience of Victims at the Berlin Wall Memorial Museum,” in Cultural Practices of Victimhood, edited by Martin Hoondert, Paul Mutsaers and William Arfman, 83–103 (London: Routledge, 2019).

Finally, I would like to thank my partner, Malcolm Allison. He kept telling me to finish this book, which is dedicated to him.
