‘A premier publisher of oral history.’ - CHOICE The world’s leading English-language oral history book series, Palgrave Studies in Oral History brings together engaging work from scholars, activists, and other practitioners. Books in the series are aimed at a broad community of readers; they employ edited oral history interviews to explore a wide variety of topics and themes in all areas of history, placing first-person accounts in broad historical context and engaging issues of historical memory and narrative construction. Fresh approaches to the use and analysis of oral history, as well as to the organization of text, are a particular strength of the series, as are projects that use oral accounts to illuminate human rights issues. Submissions are welcomed for projects from any geographical region, as well as cross-cultural and comparative work.

*To the twenty-five men who participated in interviews for this project. You invited me into your homes and through your testimonies, into your lives.
This book is dedicated to you.*

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am deeply grateful for the support and guidance I received from so many wonderful people I have had the pleasure of working with throughout this project. To the twenty-five men who participated in interviews, thank you for engaging with me so openly. Thank you for sharing your memories with me and for your valuable feedback on various parts of this book. It has been an honour to work with you.

This project started as a PhD, and my supervisors, Shirleene Robinson and Robert Reynolds, generously shared their time and knowledge. Shirleene Robinson's expertise and critical engagement with this project ensured it was an enriching, enjoyable, and incredibly rewarding experience. Robert Reynolds' valuable guidance and thoughtful feedback has been central to my growth as a historian. My sincere thanks also go to the broader research community at Macquarie University. I thoroughly enjoyed the encouraging discussions, writing retreats, and writing "boot camps." My particular thanks to Chelsea Barnett, who was a great writing companion and made Australia feel like a second home, Julia Miller, Leigh Boucher, and Tanya Muscat, each of whom read chapters at various stages of this project and offered valuable and insightful comments. I am thankful for the feedback I received from Frank Bongiorno, Alistair Thomson, Chris Brickell, and for the close engagement from the two anonymous reviewers with Palgrave Macmillan. I also benefitted immensely from the encouragement and advice I received from Catharine Coleborne, Nēpia Mahuika, and colleagues at Macquarie University, the Australian National University, and at the University of Auckland, especially Linda Bryder and Barry Reay. Thank you also to the team at Palgrave Macmillan, especially the commissioning editor Megan Laddusaw and the editorial assistant Christine Pardue.

The recruitment phase of this research was completed with the generosity of several individuals and organisations that helped to promote my study within their networks. Thank you to Mike Smith for your engagement with this project, Nick Henderson at the Australian Lesbian and Gay Archives, and Alan Brotherton, Johann Kolstee, and Luka Upcroft at the AIDS Council of New South Wales. Many librarians and archivists helped me to access sources for this book. Staff at the National Library of Australia, the State Library of NSW, the Australian Lesbian and Gay Archives in Melbourne, Sydney's Pride History Group, and the Noel Butlin Archives Centre at the Australian National University were especially helpful.

The research for this project was made possible by an Australian Postgraduate Award. I was also fortunate to receive funding from the Department of Modern History, Politics and International Relations at Macquarie University, the Macquarie University Post Graduate Research Fund, and the Oral History NSW Grant. I am grateful for the opportunities to share many parts of this book at conferences hosted by TEDx Macquarie, the Oral History Association of Australia, the Australian Historical Association, the Oral History Society, the Australian and New Zealand Society for the History of Medicine, and the National Oral History Association of New Zealand. Seminars hosted by the University of Newcastle, Australian National University, the University of Auckland, and the Sydney Feminist History Group also offered great opportunities to discuss this work. Thank you to those who organised and attended these events.

My family and friends have been a vital source of support throughout this book. In addition to those I have already mentioned, my particular thanks to Basil Nicoll, Cassie Snow, Melissa Hempstead, Parva Zareie, Halie Edmonds, and Emma Gleadhill, and to my in-laws Michele, Ian, and David Rowe, June and Ginna Day, and Margaret and Kevin Gorman. My siblings, Maria and Michael Ware, have been an endless source of support, laughter, and love. My parents Mina and Cyril Ware (who proof read the entire monograph twice) have always shown confidence in me and taken a keen interest in my research. Thank you for everything. I would like to especially thank my husband Philip Rowe whose unwavering love and support was a source of strength throughout this process. Thank you all for engaging with this project, and for encouraging me every step of the way.
