

Teaching Struggling Students

Laura M. Harrison

Teaching Struggling Students

Lessons Learned from Both Sides of the Classroom

palgrave
macmillan

Laura M. Harrison
Ohio University
Athens, OH, USA

ISBN 978-3-030-13011-4 ISBN 978-3-030-13012-1 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-030-13012-1>

Library of Congress Control Number: 2019932968

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2019

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use. The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover illustration: © John Rawsterne/patternhead.com

This Palgrave Pivot imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG
The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

I dedicate this book to all students who find the courage to struggle.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I want to thank Milana Vernikova at Palgrave Macmillan for inviting me to write this book, a process that has allowed me to grow as both a writer and teacher. Thanks also to Linda Braus, who shepherded the book through the process with effectiveness and humor. I also want to thank Murali Dharan for his great work on the editing process. Thanks also to those who reviewed the initial proposal and gave incredibly useful feedback. I don't know who you are, but I know that your close attention guided me many times in the writing.

I talked to my own students frequently about my struggling student experience, both when I was having it and when I was writing about it. They were endlessly encouraging, sharing both their own stories of struggle as well as sources that helped me to think about the issues more creatively. This is true of my colleagues as well, so I want to acknowledge my Higher Education and Student Affairs (HESA) community. More specifically, I want to express my gratitude to the following HESA students and colleagues whose expertise informed my work: Joe Carver (online education), Antonique Flood (unlearning), Pete Mather (service learning), and Katy Mathuews (time poverty). Thank you also to Dave Nguyen and Shah Hasan for introducing me to a wealth of literature that shaped my thinking about pedagogy.

I thank my wife, Christy Zempter, for the conversations that helped me to make interdisciplinary connections both while imagining and writing this book. I thank my parents, Dan and Lindy Harrison, for consistently supporting my goals whether they take me near or far. I thank my friends for their genuine interest in the things that matter to me, particularly Chris Bhat, Carey Busch, and Yegan Pillay, who embody the best of the counseling profession both professionally and personally. I know that living a life blessed by continual interaction with people who care about stretching themselves enriches my work. It is in this spirit that I also thank my global conversation partners, Alev Sacak, Birol Sacak, and Heber Da Silva. The chance to meet such thoughtful and adventurous people motivated me to embark on this journey in the first place.

Finally, I thank Reshmi for being such a brilliant, warm, and funny companion on our 15-week trip through introductory linguistics. I may well have failed my first linguistics course had I not had access to both her brain and encouragement. I also thank Gabriela Gaby Castañeda-Gleason and Selikem Gotah for their incredibly generous spirits in both enduring me as a student and allowing me to write about their classes. They taught me so much beyond the scope of their respective courses. They exemplify the best of college teaching and, along with Reshmi, are ultimately why my struggling student story has a happy ending.

CONTENTS

1	Introduction	1
2	Privilege as a Blind Spot to Understanding Struggle	11
3	What Struggle Feels Like	33
4	Success Through Connection	55
5	Floundering Online	77
6	Making College Better	97
	Index	119