

Palgrave Studies in Green Criminology

Series Editors

Angus Nurse
School of Law
Middlesex University
London, UK

Rob White
School of Social Sciences
University of Tasmania
Hobart, TAS, Australia

Melissa Jarrell
Department of Social Sciences
Texas A&M University - Corpus Christi
Corpus Christi, TX, USA

Criminologists have increasingly become involved and interested in environmental issues to the extent that the term Green Criminology is now recognised as a distinct subgenre of criminology. Within this unique area of scholarly activity, researchers consider not just harms to the environment, but also the links between green crimes and other forms of crime, including organised crime's movement into the illegal trade in wildlife or the links between domestic animal abuse and spousal abuse and more serious forms of offending such as serial killing. This series will provide a forum for new works and new ideas in green criminology for both academics and practitioners working in the field, with two primary aims: to provide contemporary theoretical and practice-based analysis of green criminology and environmental issues relating to the development of and enforcement of environmental laws, environmental criminality, policy relating to environmental harms and harms committed against non-human animals and situating environmental harms within the context of wider social harms; and to explore and debate new contemporary issues in green criminology including ecological, environmental and species justice concerns and the better integration of a green criminological approach within mainstream criminal justice. The series will reflect the range and depth of high-quality research and scholarship in this burgeoning area, combining contributions from established scholars wishing to explore new topics and recent entrants who are breaking new ground.

More information about this series at
<http://www.palgrave.com/gp/series/14622>

Rebecca W. Y. Wong

The Illegal Wildlife Trade in China

Understanding The Distribution
Networks

palgrave
macmillan

Rebecca W. Y. Wong
City University of Hong Kong
Kowloon Tong, Hong Kong

Palgrave Studies in Green Criminology
ISBN 978-3-030-13665-9 ISBN 978-3-030-13666-6 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-030-13666-6>

Library of Congress Control Number: 2019934453

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2019

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, expressed or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover credit: Getty146410101

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG

The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

Acknowledgements

Part of this book is based on my D.Phil. thesis, which was submitted to the Department of Sociology, University of Oxford in 2014. I am grateful for the guidance and support from my doctorate advisor Professor Federico Varese, who never fails to offer unfailing support on my research. I am also thankful for Professor Lo Tit Wing for offering me advice, guidance, and support since my days as a doctorate student, and to my colleagues on the Criminology and Sociology team at the City University of Hong Kong. I am indebted for the never-failing support from my mentors Professor Eric Chui and Professor Ray Yep. In particular, this book would not have been possible but for the support shown by Professor Rob White, and Miss Helen Steadman and Miss Amy McLean for their professional top-notch editing and proofreading services. I would also like to thank Miss Annie Wong On Ling and Miss Yu Hanting for their unfailing technical support. My former research assistant Miss Lee Chee Yan has gone beyond the call of duty to assist me with this book. The Netherlands Institute for the Study of Crime and Law Enforcement and the Royal Netherlands Academy of Arts and Sciences has offered me generous support during my term as a Visiting Professor in the Netherlands, where I finished my final revisions for the manuscript.

My family continues to be a constant source of inspiration and support. My mother has and will always continue to educate me in ways no lectures, seminars, or books can ever do. As an adult, I have come to understand it was not easy for her to raise two children after the death of my father. My elder brother, despite my immaturity and selfishness, never fails to encourage and love me unconditionally.

There are two people I hold closest to my heart who are no longer with me today but who have imprinted deeply in my memories. Despite their untimely deaths, our brief yet irreplaceable encounters will always have a special place in my heart. I am, in many ways, unworthy of their kindness.

My best friend since childhood, Timothy P. H. Chan, was defeated by brain cancer at the age of twenty-seven. Thoughts of his courage to walk into yet another chemotherapy treatment have given me immense strength during some of my roughest encounters on my fieldwork journey. The unpleasantness was only a fraction of what he had to face during his lone battle with brain cancer. Many hopes for genuine, innocent, and solid friendship which Tim unconditionally gave me during his short-lived time.

I was fortunate to have had a loving father for eleven years of my life. I realize now as an adult that such beautiful times should not be taken for granted as there are many who have never met their own father. There is a part only a father can fill in a child's heart and my gratitude to my late father, for having been part of my life, is beyond words. After many years of his passing, a part of me still weeps when I think of him. It will be my greatest achievement if I can be half the person he was.

This book is for them both, for they have made a difference in my life beyond measures.

Hong Kong
2018

Rebecca W. Y. Wong

Contents

1	The Demand and Supply of Protected Wildlife Products in China	1
2	China and the Illegal Wildlife Trade	13
3	The Illegal Wildlife Trade	39
4	Conducting Research on the Illegal Wildlife Trade in China	63
5	The Illegal Distribution of Ivory in Hong Kong	93
6	The Illegal Tiger Parts Trade	119
7	Consumption of Protected Wildlife as Delicacy	139
8	Conclusion	161
	Index	167

List of Figures

Fig. 2.1	Map of China (All the maps in this book are recreated with Adobe Photoshop)	14
Fig. 2.2	Vietnam (Mong Cai) to China (Dongxing, Guangxi)	22
Fig. 2.3	Myanmar (Muse) to China (Ruili Kunming)	23
Fig. 2.4	Nepal (Rasuwagadhi) to Tibet (Kerung)	24
Fig. 2.5	Laos (Luang Prabang) to China (Jinghong)	25

List of Tables

Table 2.1	Protected wildlife smuggled into China from neighbouring countries	15
Table 2.2	Selected common smuggling routes used by criminal networks across the Chinese borders	21
Table 2.3	Wildlife Protection Law in China	29
Table 4.1	Profiles of Group A interviewees	72
Table 4.2	Profiles of Group B interviewees	72
Table 7.1	Three selected types of protected wildlife traded illegally as food in China	143