

Cambridge Imperial and Post-Colonial Studies
Series

Series Editors
Richard Drayton
Department of History
King's College London
London, UK

Saul Dubow
Magdalene College
University of Cambridge
Cambridge, UK

The Cambridge Imperial and Post-Colonial Studies series is a collection of studies on empires in world history and on the societies and cultures which emerged from colonialism. It includes both transnational, comparative and connective studies, and studies which address where particular regions or nations participate in global phenomena. While in the past the series focused on the British Empire and Commonwealth, in its current incarnation there is no imperial system, period of human history or part of the world which lies outside of its compass. While we particularly welcome the first monographs of young researchers, we also seek major studies by more senior scholars, and welcome collections of essays with a strong thematic focus. The series includes work on politics, economics, culture, literature, science, art, medicine, and war. Our aim is to collect the most exciting new scholarship on world history with an imperial theme.

More information about this series at <http://www.palgrave.com/gp/series/13937>

Daniel Sanjiv Roberts
Jonathan Jeffrey Wright
Editors

Ireland's Imperial Connections,
1775–1947

palgrave
macmillan

Editors

Daniel Sanjiv Roberts
Queen's University Belfast
Belfast, UK

Jonathan Jeffrey Wright
Maynooth University
Maynooth, Kildare, Ireland

Cambridge Imperial and Post-Colonial Studies Series
ISBN 978-3-030-25983-9 ISBN 978-3-030-25984-6 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-030-25984-6>

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2019

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use. The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover illustration: Mieneke Andeweg-van Rijn / Alamy Stock Photo

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG.

The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book originated in a conference organized by the editors under the auspices of the erstwhile Institute for Collaborative Research in the Humanities (ICRH) at Queen's University Belfast. We would like to thank its then Director, Prof. John Thompson, and the staff of the ICRH, for their support. We are greatly indebted to all the participants of that conference for their collegiality and for the many fruitful ideas that were generated by the event. Those who continued to collaborate with us towards this publication, and others whom we approached to join us at a later stage, are gratefully and equally acknowledged. We learned much from them, and are delighted to present their work within the framework envisioned by our call. On a practical level, we are very much indebted to our indexer Averill Buchanan for her meticulous work accomplished in a timely way. We are grateful, likewise, to the editors of the Cambridge Imperial and Post-Colonial Studies series for accepting our work and bringing it to press, and to Maeve Sinnott at Palgrave Macmillan for guiding us through the submission process.

Jonathan Jeffery Wright would also like to acknowledge the encouragement and support of his colleagues in the Department of History at Maynooth University, and, above all, to thank Rhiannon for her patience and good humour, and George and Clara for filling the house with laughter, noise, and much-needed distraction.

Daniel Sanjiv Roberts is grateful to the Faculty of Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences, and the School of Arts, English and Languages at Queen's University Belfast, which provided the research facilities and a collegial environment for the growth of this project. He is grateful to Queen's for research and publication funding towards this book. Finally, he thanks his family, Satya, Syama, and Tanvi, for their support, interest, and love; he hopes that their family connections spread between many of the locations covered in this book will have made this project all the more endearing to them.

CONTENTS

1	Introduction	1
	Daniel Sanjiv Roberts and Jonathan Jeffrey Wright
	Part I Inhabiting Empire	15
2	“Residing in this distant portion of the great empire”: The Irish in Imperial Halifax, Nova Scotia	17
	Peter Ludlow and Terrence Murphy
3	From Enniskillen to Nairobi: The Coles in British East Africa	37
	Eve Patten
4	Walking to China: Infatuation and the Irish in New South Wales	57
	Killian Quigley
5	Competing Narratives: White Slavery, Servitude and the Irish in Late-Eighteenth-Century America	75
	Martyn Powell

Part II	Writing/Imagining Empire	101
6	“Humble Obedience to the Will of Heaven”: Charles Johnston’s Providential and Migratory Sensibility Daniel Sanjiv Roberts	103
7	Prudence and Prejudice in Maria Edgeworth’s “Murad the Unlucky” (1804) Sonja Lawrenson	121
8	“A work purely local?”: Narratives of Empire in George Benn’s A History of the Town of Belfast Jonathan Jeffrey Wright	143
Part III	Resistance/Collusion	169
9	The 1857 Indian Uprising in Irish Ballads: Voices of the Subaltern Raphaëla Adjobimey	171
10	Afghanistan, the Indian “Mutiny,” and the Bicultural Stereotype of John Nicholson Pramod K. Nayar	191
11	Violent Resistance: The Irish Revolution and India Kate O’Malley	213
Part IV	Networking	231
12	Stateless and Destitute: The O’Rourke Family of Saint-Domingue, Nantes and Wexford, 1788–1805 Orla Power	233

13	An Irish Surgeon in Barbados and Demerara: Vexation, Misery and Opportunity	251
	Jennifer McLaren
14	“Colouring the map red”: Lady Harriot Dufferin and the Imperial Networks of the Dufferin Fund	273
	Sarah Hunter
	Bibliography of Principal Works Cited	291
	Index	315

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Raphaela Adjobimey teaches English and Religion at the Städtische Gymnasium Sedanstraße in Wuppertal, Germany. She holds a BA in English and American Studies and Theology (2007) and an MEd (2009) (Ruhr-University Bochum, Germany). She completed her MA in Modern Literary Studies (Queen’s University Belfast, 2008) after being awarded a scholarship from the DAAD (German Academic Exchange Service). She subsequently completed her PhD on “Irish Perspectives on the Indian ‘Mutiny’ of 1857” in 2013 as a recipient of a grant from the English Department of QUB.

Sarah Hunter was awarded a PhD from Trinity College, Dublin in 2015. Her PhD, titled “The Dublin University Mission—Irish medical missionaries in Britain’s empire in India, 1891–1929: identity, impact and sustainability,” assessed the role of, and contribution made by, predominately female doctors and nurses working in a remote region of India. She works in university partnerships for the Global Team at Ulster University.

Sonja Lawrenson lectures on eighteenth- and nineteenth-century literature at Manchester Metropolitan University. Her research centres on women’s writing in eighteenth-century and Romantic Ireland. She has published on authors such as Frances Sheridan, Elizabeth Hamilton, Maria Edgeworth, and Sydney Owenson, and more broadly on Romantic Orientalism, Romantic popular fiction and the eighteenth-century Irish stage.

Peter Ludlow is an adjunct professor of Catholic Studies at St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish, Nova Scotia. As the President of the Canadian Catholic Historical Association, he has published widely on religion and migration in Atlantic Canada. His first book The Canny Scot: Archbishop James Morrison of Antigonish was published by McGill-Queen's University Press in 2015.

Jennifer McLaren returned to study after a legal career in Australia and the UK, and she completed her PhD at Macquarie University in 2018. Her thesis utilised the biographies of ten sojourners in the Caribbean to examine the Irish experience of empire during the revolutionary era. Her Masters of Research thesis on the reporting of imperial news in England and Ireland regarding the Battle of the Saintes (1783) was adapted for publication in a special issue of Éire-Ireland on transnational Ireland in 2016.

Terrence Murphy is Emeritus Professor of Religious Studies and History at Saint Mary's University (Halifax), where he previously served as Vice-President, Academic and Research. A specialist in the religious history of Canada, with an emphasis on the Atlantic region, he is the co-author of a number of books and articles including A Concise History of Christianity in Canada (1996) and Creed and Culture: The Place of English-speaking Catholics in Canadian Society, 1780–1930 (1993). He is the former editor of Historical Studies, the annual journal of the Canadian Catholic Historical Society.

Pramod K. Nayar teaches at the Department of English, the University of Hyderabad. He is the author, most recently, of Ecoprecarity: Vulnerability in Literature and Culture (2019), Brand Postcolonial (2019), Bhopal's Ecological Gothic (2017), The Extreme in Contemporary Culture (2017), Human Rights and Literature (2016) and The Indian Graphic Novel (2016) besides essays on graphic novels, celebrity studies, Fanon and others in several journals. His current projects include a book on human rights comics and one on Indian travel writing, 1830–1947.

Kate O'Malley is Managing Editor of the Royal Irish Academy's Dictionary of Irish Biography (DIB). She was Assistant Editor with the Documents on Irish Foreign Policy (DIFP) series from 2005 to 2019. She is a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin (BA, PhD). She has written extensively on Indo-Irish relations and her book Ireland, India and Empire was published by Manchester University Press in 2008. Her research interests encompass Irish diplomatic and political history, twentieth-century Indian history, British imperial and Commonwealth history and British decolonisation. She is an occasional lecturer at Trinity College, Dublin as well as an associate of the Centre for Contemporary Irish History. She has also taught at University College Dublin and at Queen's University, Belfast.

Eve Patten is a professor in the School of English at Trinity College, Dublin, and Director of the MPhil in Irish Writing at Trinity's Oscar Wilde Centre for Irish and Creative Writing. She has published widely on modern Irish literary and cultural studies and is the author of Samuel Ferguson and the Culture of Nineteenth-Century Ireland (2004) and Imperial Refugee: Olivia Manning's Fictions of War (2012). She is the editor of Irish Literature in Transition, 1940–1980, forthcoming from Cambridge University Press in 2020, and is researching a book on the representation of Ireland in English literary modernism.

Martyn Powell is Professor and Head of the School of Humanities at the University of Bristol. He is a specialist in Irish political, cultural and social history, and his publications include Britain and Ireland in the Eighteenth-Century Crisis of Empire (2003), The Politics of Consumption in Eighteenth-Century Ireland (2005), Piss-Pots, Printers and Public Opinion in Eighteenth-Century Dublin (2009), Clubs and Societies in Eighteenth-Century Ireland (2010) (edited with James Kelly), and many articles and essays. He is working on a study of violence in Irish society, titled "Houghers and Chalkers: The Knife in Revolutionary Ireland, 1760–1815," and an edition of the political works of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, part of a Leverhulme-funded research project, for Oxford University Press.

Orla Power completed her PhD "Irish Planters, Atlantic Merchants: The Development of Saint Croix, Danish West Indies, 1750–1766" at the Moore Institute, NUI Galway in 2011. She was an Irish Research Council Postdoctoral Fellow at the Department of History, Trinity College Dublin from 2012 to 2014. Her areas of interest include eighteenth-century Irish merchant families and their activities in Europe and the French, Spanish and Danish Caribbean. She lives in Galway with her husband and two children where she also works as medical doctor.

Killian Quigley is a postdoctoral fellow at the Sydney Environment Institute, University of Sydney. His PhD was awarded by the Department of English at Vanderbilt University. He has recently been investigating the poetics and aesthetics of oceanic, and particularly submarine, environments. He is co-editor, with Margaret Cohen, of The Aesthetics of the Undersea (Routledge Environmental Humanities, 2019) and author of a manuscript entitled The Myriad Sea: Submarine Poetics (under review). His research is also available in Eighteenth-Century Studies, Eighteenth-Century Life, and The Eighteenth Century: Theory and Interpretation, and forthcoming in A Cultural History of the Sea in the Age of Enlightenment (Bloomsbury) and elsewhere.

Daniel Sanjiv Roberts is a reader in English at Queen's University Belfast and the current Director of its Centre for Eighteenth-Century Studies. He has published major scholarly editions of works by Charles Johnston, Robert Southey and Thomas De Quincey, and written widely on eighteenth-century and Romantic-period literature in relation to empire. His edition of Southey's The Curse of Kehama won a citation from the MLA as a Distinguished Scholarly Edition in 2005.

Jonathan Jeffrey Wright is Lecturer in History at Maynooth University. His research focuses on Ulster's connections with the Atlantic World during the Age of Revolution. He has recently completed an edition of the letters of the Belfast-born Trinidadian slave-owner John Black, and his previous publications include The "Natural Leaders" and Their World: Politics, Culture and Society in Belfast, c. 1801–1832 (2012), Spaces of Global Knowledge: Exhibition, Encounter and Exchange in an Age of Empire (2015, edited with Diarmid A. Finnegan) and Urban Spaces in Nineteenth-Century Ireland (2018, edited with Georgina Laragy and Olwen Purdue).

LIST OF FIGURES

- Fig. 3.1 The fourth Earl of Enniskillen with family and senior estate servants at Florence Court, County Fermanagh. (Enniskillen Papers, by kind permission of the Deputy Keeper of the Public Records Office of Northern Ireland) 38
- Fig. 3.2 Berkeley, Galbraith and Florence Cole as children at Florence Court, County Fermanagh. (Enniskillen Papers, by kind permission of the Deputy Keeper of the Public Records Office of Northern Ireland) 39
- Fig. 10.1 Brigadier-General John Nicholson, Memorial Statue, Lisburn, Northern Ireland (Copyright, Alamy Stock Photo) 192
- Fig. 13.1 The late John Crawford MD RWGM of Masons in Maryland. Engraved agreeably to a resolution of Cassia Lodge, No.45, as a tribute in personal regard and of respect for the many virtues that adorn his character, 1814. (Source: Julia E. Wilson, “Dr. John Crawford, 1746–1813.” Bulletin of the School of Medicine University of Maryland 25 (1950): 121. Reproduced with permission from the University of Maryland Health Sciences and Human Services Library. <https://archive.org/details/bulletinofuniver2525/page/120>) 252